Nazis Offer Turkey, Greece Rich Settlements To Desert Britain; Candler Field Control Tower Undermanned, Probers Are Told

Germany Backs Demands With March Threats

Athens, However, Stands Firm in Determination To Resist Hitler.

By The Associated Press.
Germany has offered Greece and Turkey rich settlements in a final diplomatic campaign backed by threats of a military march toward the Aegean within 48 hours, it was intimated last night in dispatches from German-occupied Sofia.

Especially weight was attached to these reports because they were passed by the Bulgarian press office under a new censorship set up after Germany took over the country.

In brief, it was said Germany promised:

To Greece—A peace settlement with Italy whereby the courageous Greeks would keep all the territory they held at the beginning of the war against Italy last October; in other words, all of Greece.

To Turkey—Locomotives, machinery, and various other economic rewards. The price is a farewell (by Turkey) to Great Britain.

It was apparent in Sofia that the Germans, steadily building up their Balkan army in the event they must strike by force of arms, placed great store upon the success of their diplomatic offensive. But countering that was Greece's determination, expressed in general terms, to fight against any blow, no matter whence it comes.

Nazi Pace Continues.

The hard pace of Nazi military preparations had continued all day Friday in Bulgaria, and some military observers in Sofia believed the blow at Greece was set for this weekend, if it came at all.

Long lines of tanks, artillery and troops moved in commandeer buses, trains and trucks in steady procession to positions in the Rhodope mountains, whence they looked down across Grecian Thrace and the Aegean. There were believed to be at least 150,000 troops there and behind them were fresh divisions moving along the long lines of communication from Germany to Rumania.

The British were sending all the equipment they could spare to the Greeks and Turks, who, massed on the western side of the Dardanelles, were in position to attack from the flank should they decide to go to the aid of their traditional friends.

In London a neutral military source asserted the British were rushing enough arms captured from the Italians in Africa to equip an entire Greek army corps.

The Greeks moved quantities of artillery and reserves to bolster

British Aid Passage Expected by Night

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Opposition to the lend bill collapsed tonight, and with administration leaders in secure command of the situation, the senate rapidly pushed the measure to a point where final passage confidently was expected by tomorrow night.

This confidence on the part of leaders was based upon an expectation that no filibustering tactics would develop. A possibility remained, of course, that they might, but in a long day and evening which saw amendment after amendment summarily rejected, the opponents of the measure showed no inclination to indulge in any strategy of delay.

After nearly three weeks of general debate, the voting stage was reached early in the day, and the opposition rapidly crumpled on a succession of ballots rejecting all the amendments it offered or supported. Most such votes ran nearly or better than 2 to 1 for the proponents of the bill.

First of all, the latter snowed under a succession of efforts to restrict the use of the nation's armed forces to the Western Hemisphere. In one guise or another, this proposal was advanced a full half-dozen times, and in each instance was rejected.

Then the administration wrote into the measure its own views on what such restrictions should consist of—a stipulation that the bill was not to be construed as making any change in existing laws relating to the use of the

12 Axis Ships New Vessels Taken or Sunk May Be Given In Somaliland To the British

British Report 21,000
Italians Captured and Killed in Conquest.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 7.—(AP)—

The final conquest of Italian Somaliland was proclaimed by British forces today, along with the capture, destruction or grounding of 12 Axis merchantmen in naval operations which knocked out the colony's two chief bases for Indian Ocean raiders—Chisimaio and Mogadiscio.

All Fascist troops who have not surrendered or fallen in combat have been run out of the Somaliland and are fleeing into Ethiopia, a military spokesman declared.

He listed Italian casualties in the three-week Somaliland campaign at 21,000—including killed and prisoners.

The pursuing British were declared themselves to have struck well into Ethiopia proper. Five Italian ships totaling 28,153 tons were captured and four others were scuttled when the British battle units stormed up to Chisimaio February 15 in a coordinated attack with land forces, the admiral said in London.

A German ship, the Uckermark, 7,021 tons, also was scuttled, and a second German ship, the 590-ton Askari, was driven ashore.

Then the fleet hastened on up the coast, helping in the swift capture of the Mogadiscio.

There the 9,830-ton British cruiser Shropshire sank the 6,861-ton Italian tanker Pennsylvania. British suspicions that Chisimaio and Mogadiscio were used as refueling stations by German surface raiders were confirmed by the discovery and release of 200 British and Allied seamen held prisoner near Mogadiscio.

As to the Mediterranean theater, the British acknowledged that a mass raid by 100 or more German divebombers, bombers and fighters was carried out against Malta Wednesday.

The British said they bagged 16 of the raiders.

Norway and Russia Open Trade Policy

MOSCOW, March 7.—(AP)—A Norwegian trade commission arrived today to negotiate an exchange of goods between Soviet Russia and Norway.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP)—

A congressional committee heard testimony from a member of the Navy's high command today that some proposed new naval auxiliary vessels, such as cargo ships and tankers, might be transferred to Britain under the lend-lease program.

Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, assistant chief of naval operations, conceded the possibility in reply to questions during testimony before the House Naval Committee on legislation to authorize the construction or acquisition of 200,000 additional tons of auxiliaries.

The admiral quickly and emphatically asserted, however, that there had been no definite allocation of any of the proposed ships. He was followed by Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, who predicted that before the end of this year the Navy would be "pinched again for auxiliary vessels."

Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, precipitated the lively discussion of the possible transfer when he said to Ingersoll: "Let's put the cards on the table, admiral. Is this 200,000 tons needed for the maintenance of our fleet, or is part of it for the lend-lease program?"

After reiterating there had been no definite allocation of the vessels, Ingersoll replied: "We might use part of it that way."

Asserting "we cannot foresee what we may be required to do in the course of the next year," Ingersoll reminded the committee that the Navy already has exhausted both its funds and authority for either construction or purchase of auxiliaries.

Zero Ceiling Here Suspends Flights

With adverse weather creating a zero ceiling and poor visibility conditions, commercial flying at Candler Field last night was at a standstill, control tower attaches reported.

All flights to and from Atlanta were cancelled. Several flights were cancelled Thursday night. The last commercial plane arrived at the field at 12:01 o'clock yesterday morning. Only an Army plane, returning from Chattanooga, landed yesterday.

Board Advised Of Deficiencies In Equipment

Sensational Testimony
Given by Two Operators at Airport.

By WILLARD COPE.

Sensational testimony that the control tower maintained by the city government at Candler Field is inadequately manned and needed equipment lacking; that glare and obstructions frequently are so bad as to interfere with observing arrival of airplanes and that the tower often has been ignored by arriving pilots gave high local significance yesterday to the Civil Aeronautics Board's probe of last week's fatal crash of an Eastern airliner.

Two witnesses, C. M. Pruett, control tower operator, and Ben Faulkner, senior control tower operator, made the disclosures under questioning of the federal examining board of five, headed by G. Grant Mason Jr., Washington, D. C.

Wind Gauge Was Out.

Although it was agreed that none of the deficiencies cited had bearing on the crash, Pruett said the anemometer, or wind velocity gauge, was not recording the night of the accident and that he had to operate it by hand. It was out of order a total of six weeks, he said, but now had been repaired. Better radio receiving equipment and probably additional instruments as well, are needed, both operators declared. One receiving set had been severely injured in a rain storm, but returned to use.

Field traffic, which the tower must control, has reached as high as 500 arrivals in a single "trick" of eight hours, said Pruett. In addition, the operator must, in theory, monitor six radio frequencies, listen to at least four frequencies, answer telephones and attempt to give information requested by pilots.

Numerous Reflections.

At night one man must do all this," Pruett testified. "Also the tower is so constructed that there are numerous reflections. There are 16 supporters that interfere with seeing the ships. It is sometimes impossible to see out—then the operator must go outside to observe."

"A man doesn't have an opportunity to log all of the things he's supposed to log. I have been in-

How To Reduce---Be a Fat Man In England, Says Eddy Gilmore

By EDDY GILMORE.

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—It is a very strange feeling to be a fat man, especially an American fat man, in wartime London.

First you are an oddity because of your American clothes; second, you are an oddity because you are fat.

Yesterday two small boys stared in awe at me, and then one shrieked in high glee at what he saw.

"What is so funny?" I asked a friend.

"You are," he replied. "That kid probably doesn't remember seeing a fat man before. You know, in times like these it is just like seeing your first elephant."

A good English restaurant can be one of the most comforting places in the world, but to an American fat man it can be one of the most uncomfortable.

Everywhere there is a patriotic

Pruett, left, control tower operator at Candler Field, and Ben Faulkner, senior control tower operator, yesterday charged that the control tower is inadequately manned and badly in need of equipment as the Civil Aeronautics Board continued its investigation in the crash last week of an Eastern Air Lines sleeper.

Rain Gone, Cold Due-Weatherman

Rain, rain, go away. That was the sentiment of most Atlantans yesterday—and so the weather man obliged by predicting partly cloudy skies for today. The rain, he added, is gone for a while.

Today will be rather cold, however, due to strong northwest winds. Temperature range is due to begin at 34 degrees and rise into the 40s.

One Killed, 1 Hurt As 'Corpse' Speaks

BARCELONA, Spain, March 7. (UP)—A farmer hitch-hiked a ride today on a truck carrying a coffin.

It was raining, so the farmer crawled into the coffin and closed the lid.

Two other men thumbed rides and sat down beside the coffin. The farmer pushed up the lid and remarked "it's stopped raining."

One man was killed and the other injured seriously when they leaped in terror from the moving truck.

Rainy Weather Causes
Deadline Change to

Director Garden Contest.

If the weatherman's predictions for the next few days are correct, local gardeners will find the wind and rain a little too much competition for their pleasant contemplations of the beauties of spring flowers and the pleasures of putting out tender young plants on balmy spring days.

And so, because the weatherman doesn't seem disposed to give local outdoor enthusiasts ideal gardening weather, The Constitution has decided to extend the deadline for entering the $1,000 Yard and Garden Contest another week. Thus, the closing time for entries will be Saturday, March 15.

The decision was reached after consultation with the experts who will act as judges in the contest, and with the local weather bureau. Said the judges: "People just can't get too enthusiastic about gardening when they are thoroughly chilled by the cold and rain. We know there are many people who are planning to do a great deal of work in their gardens this year, but they have not had an opportunity to get outdoors to survey their gardens and make plans. Since they have made no plans, they do not know whether or not they want to enter the contest. In our opinion,

Russia To Permit British Naval Aid to Turkey, Budapest Hears

English Fleet Could Menace Nazi Territory

Reports Declare Ankara Preparing Bases for Britain's Warships

BUDAPEST, March 7.—(UP)—Great Britain, with Russia's tacit consent, may send warships of the Mediterranean fleet through the Dardanelles into the Black sea as part of a new guarantee of mutual aid to Turkey, diplomatic reports from Istanbul said today.

The guarantee, according to these confirmed reports, was made by British Foreign Secretary Eden in course of his Ankara talks last week with Russia's consent, brought to Ankara by Sir Stafford Cripps, British envoy to Moscow. (The official Russian organ, Red Star, Thursday quoted "foreign observers" as predicting that the British fleet would move into the Black sea, menacing the coasts of German-occupied Bulgaria and Rumania.)

Parallel Policy. Persistent reports reached Budapest during the day, many of them from Istanbul and Ankara, that Russia and Britain were planning a parallel policy insofar as Turkey and the Dardanelles were concerned. However, there was no indication of the Soviets turning directly upon Germany.

Britain is entering the Montreux convention governing the straits traffic, to send warships through the Bosphorus if Turkey is menaced and Britain goes to her assistance. The Turkish fleet was reported to have received orders to prepare facilities at the Bosphorus and Dardanelles where British warships can be based. Turkish airports reportedly were being made ready to receive at least 30 squadrons of Royal Air Force warplanes as part of the bolstering of the Anglo-Turkish alliance.

Indications that Britain and Turkey were devoting their chief attention to defense of the Dardanelles—and the "Drang Nach Osten" to the Iraq oil fields—was seen in reports that the Greeks might not defend Salonika against an Axis attack. German troops massed on the Bulgarian border only 60 miles northward.

Turks Stall Hitler. Eden during his conferences in Athens this week was said by the semi-official Hellenic Press to have offered the British fleet for withdrawal of Greek forces from Albania.

In connection with the reported preparations for the movement of British warships into the Black sea, it was understood here that the Turks in their talks with Eden and General Dill, of the British imperial general staff, insisted upon a promise of British naval aid as a "minimum guarantee" from Britain that effective aid would be forthcoming if the Axis attacked Turkey.

Because of these arrangements, it was said, Turkey is delaying her reply to the message which Hitler sent to President General Inonu Tuesday.

Ankara dispatches said the Turkish government, within three or four days, would reject Hitler's invitation to send a high Turkish statesman to Germany to discuss "closer collaboration" with the Axis.

Officers Still Seek Seventh Escape

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. DALLAS, Ga., March 7.—Officers last night continued their search for Benjamin Humes, 33, only one of seven convicts who escaped from the state highway camp here Wednesday, who is still at large.

Officers at the "Little Alcatraz" said last night no trace of the fugitive, who was serving a 35-to-70-year sentence for robbery in Fulton county, had been uncovered.

Five of the fugitives were captured shortly after they overpowered Guard John Spivey. The sixth was captured Thursday.

Water Resolution Vetted by LeCraw

Mayor LeCraw yesterday vetoed a council resolution granting free water amounting to about $33,000 a year to about 30 private and public charitable institutions and to Fulton county.

In disapproving the council resolution, the mayor cited a ruling by City Attorney Jack C. Savage that such gifts are illegal, and said no matter how much he would like to help the organizations involved, he could not sanction the free water list under the circumstances.

their defenses on the new front, apparently leaving thinned lines to hold the Italians in the Albanian Mountains.

The population in Thrace, it was reported, was being removed and the Greek commander, General Papagos, apparently did not intend to defend that coastal belt for fear of being cut off by a quick German thrust.

His plan, apparently, was to dig in on a narrow front in the narrow gorges of the Struma Valley and hold it until aid comes from Salonika.

In Sofia, the darkened capital of occupied Bulgaria, Greek diplomatic quarters declared emphatically that Greece would not accept any German offer of aid or alliance.

An alliance, or permission for

Hitler to move troops through the country, would open the way for a two-direction attack upon the Greeks at Salonika and in Albania.

In Berlin, the Germans charged Britain with seeking United States intervention in the diplomatic game with "fictional" American guarantees of aid to the Yugoslavs if they would show a stiff attitude toward the Axis.

There still was no word what the Turks would do if her Greek friends are attacked, but the Greeks were hoped to hold their position. The Turkish press displayed a belligerent tone, scoffing at Germany's "birdshot assurances" of friendship.

Army and Navy, except where new activities connected with the procurement of defense supplies was concerned.

Next, Senator Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, was up with a series of amendments of his own. No assistance should go to Soviet Russia, was one of them. No Nazis or Fascists should be employed by the federal government.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, was next with a proposal that any transfer of defense supplies to other nations first have the approval of the ranking officers of the army and navy. Texas, he called for as protective action against depleting America's own defenses.

The amendment was opposed on the ground that it would give a subordinate of the President power to veto the acts of the commander-in-chief. Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, asked if the senate thought it should give the sergeant's power to "tell the captain what to do." The Vandenberg amendment went out 36 to 45.

Then came Senator Danaher, Republican, Connecticut, with a proposal that the bill say specifically that it did not authorize any abridgment of the rights of free speech or freedom of the press. The administration answer was that the guarantees of the constitution in that respect were sufficient, and Danaher's amendment was rejected 33 to 48.

It was throughout a remarkably orderly session in view of the freedom with which tempers had flared during the long period of general debate. Usually the voting stage brings an intensification of any bad spirits which previously had existed.

But today, and tonight—with the senate holding its first night session on the bill—most senators stayed at their places or in nearby by-ones rooms, and the successive votes came so rapidly that all were surprised. Administration leaders, beaming their pleasure, both at the progress made, and the demonstration of their figuring on a final vote tomorrow.

Their calculations recognized, of course, the possibility that the opposition, returning fresh to the senate in the morning, might proceed to upset their plans by proposing unforeseen amendments, or adopting tactics of outright delay.

The administration backed an amendment saying that nothing in the act was to be construed as changing any existing law related to the use of the army and navy was adopted 65 to 24. It was proposed by Senator Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, as a substitute for a slightly more stringent amendment which he offered earlier in the week.

Bill Would Bar Drunks From Mills, Factories

Persons who take a bit too much today would be barred from mills, factories or manufacturing plants under a House bill which delegation legislative proposal offered yesterday.

structed to let the log go in preference to letting the airplanes go in the tower. Usually, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. there is a clerk in the tower with the operator, but he doesn't even have a junior operator's ticket, so the operator might just as well be alone.

When the operator does have to leave, as he must sometimes, then the tower is left practically alone.

Faulkner, in his turn, said that this clerk, and all personnel, should have ratings of senior operators.

Two flights of the Delta Air Line were cancelled because of bad weather on the night of the Eastern Air Line Silver Sleeper crash. Pruett testified, but he said other Eastern flights, both before and after the accident, came into the field safely.

Says Rules Violated. Testimony by Pruett that "numerous violations" of C. A. regulations—chiefly by itinerant and private flyers, but occasionally by air carriers—had been reported to authorities without result brought swift action from the board. It assigned an investigator to gather all such reports since January 1, 1940, and bring them to the hearing.

Faulkner tempered Pruett's allegations somewhat in this respect, saying he viewed the offenses "more as irregularities than violations," although conceding, under questioning, that the law had been infringed. Pruett said there had been conferences between tower officials, air lines and federal authorities about the violations, "but nothing ever happened."

He described somewhat humorously how he obtained an estimate of the ground velocity at the field for the airliner the night of the crash by twirling the cups forming part of the anemometer.

"It was an absolute guess," he observed. "The Weather Bureau was sending out eight miles an hour, but they always use averages. I know the wind was faster than that, so I gave them 10 miles an hour."

Weather Information. This was when the Silver Sleeper was 20 miles northeast of Atlanta, at 11:40 o'clock. Pruett said he gave it only the ground wind information.

What the Weather Bureau regards as "light," "moderate" and "heavy" rainfall drew comment from Pruett, under questioning.

"What they consider 'light,' I would consider a pretty heavy rain," he said. "What they call heavy rain would have to be darn near a cloudburst. I've seen times out there when you could hardly see anything, and they reported it moderate rain."

Questioned by Frank Caldwell, chief investigator for the Air Safety Bureau, about how the air lines observed the minimum landing regulations of a 300-foot ceiling and one-mile visibility, Pruett declared:

"I've checked that at times, and apparently they came in right on the very edge of their minimums."

Faulkner said the air-carrier ships preferred communication with their own ground stations at the field, and were known to switch from the control tower at times before receiving information about traffic on the field.

Brothers Testify. Neither operator could give any information about the barometric pressure radioed from the field to the doomed ship by which to correct its vitally important altimeter for the descent and landing. Experts had agreed the altimeters should have shown the pilot and co-pilot they were far too low before the crash, which was at 63 feet below the level of the Candler Field surface.

A new line of questioning, suggesting that perhaps evidence of value had been removed from the wreckage, was instituted by Hugh and Charles Murphy, brothers of Morrow, who were among the first to reach the wreck and give aid.

Hugh Murphy said he saw nothing taken away, but Charles said perhaps 10 to 12 spectators walked off with bits of metal and fabric.

"Parts were strewn two to three hundred feet about the scene, were they not?" inquired Jerome Lederer, associate examiner.

"That's right," Charles agreed. "Then it would have been very hard to protect everything." "That's right."

Check Pilot Heard. A hypothetical question asked of Captain Fred E. Davis, chief check pilot for Eastern Air Lines, by Frank Caldwell, chief investigator of the Aeronautics Safety Board, suggested the possibility of an error in the barometric pressure given to the Silver Sleeper by the Eastern's radio operator at Candler Field.

There was absolutely no evidence offered that such an error had been made.

The question was: "If the barometric pressure had been given in error as 29.94 inches instead of 29.94 inches, what would have been the result?"

The answer from Captain Davis was: "The altimeter would have been approximately 1,000 feet out." (The quotation as given to the pilot by the radio operator was 29.94 inches of barometric pressure, according to previous testimony.)

Captain Davis, reading from the radio log, said the correct barometric pressure of 29.94 inches had been given to the ship. A barograph recording of altitudes on the sleeper's last flight, taken from the wreckage, was exhibited and showed the flight, until the final moments, had followed the plan given at the outset.

Captain Davis also testified, from records, to the ability of Captain James A. Perry Jr., in charge of the ship, and revealed him as extremely competent. Perry, by coincidence, had only that day made instrument-flying tests, as required, at Newark, N. J., before beginning his final trip.

A great volume of questioning late in the day related the barometric-pressure reading given the ship after it passed the Stone Mountain marker, and to the routine for adjusting the altimeter to the Candler Field level, but nothing was adduced to indicate error.

Place Towers Under CAA, Gray Urges

Airport Manager, Hester Critical of Operators' Testimony.

Operation of control towers at landing fields should be under the management of the CAA, Jack Gray, manager of the municipal airport, yesterday said in defending operations of the local tower after it had been criticized by tower operators at a hearing to establish the cause of the wreck of the big Mexico Silver Sleeper.

Gray said the CAA controls plane movements from the time they leave airports until they are within three miles of the terminal, and added "as a matter of common sense and co-ordination of control work, CAA should have complete control of all airports at all times, taking charge of them from the time they roll onto the field for the take off, until they are grounded."

He said in this way duplication would be reduced, and there would be no tower operators to whom he had charge of any flying craft at any time.

Gray was joined in his defense of the municipal airport control tower by Councilman Cecil W. Hester, chairman of city council's committee on aviation. Both contended they have never been criticized by CAA for its operation, and held that it is said to be one of the best conducted control towers in the nation. Gray added "pilots tell us they had rather land at our port than any other one in this section of the entire country."

Testimony Criticized. Hester and Gray were somewhat critical of testimony given yesterday by Ben Faulkner, senior control tower operator, and Gray, tower operator, when they testified before a Civil Aeronautics Board meeting to determine the cause of the disaster.

"It is strange to us that if things were in such bad condition at the tower that we were not told of it instead of having it told to a board of inquiry for the first time," both officials said.

Gray said the finance committee was asked for another operator when the January finance sheet was made up, but that the city did not add another tower man.

The tower operators told investigators earlier in the day that tower operators are overworked, that equipment is bad, that the tower itself is so constructed that it supports block clear vision, that an anemometer (an apparatus to gauge wind velocity) was broken, and that complaints they have filed about violation of flying regulations have been ignored.

The city, however, just recently added one clerk to the tower force to lighten the load of tower operators, Hester said.

Under the present arrangement, the four tower operators work eight hours a day each, six days a week, and they have insisted that another operator be employed to cut their working week down to 44 hours. This has not yet been done.

"The addition of the operator, which we asked is desirable, but is not a matter of life or death, and failing to provide that operator did not and does not make the municipal airport operations hazardous," Gray said.

"The anemometer was broken, but we replaced it just as fast as we could get one shipped into Atlanta, and there was no delay in our work."

"I would like to add that the plane which figured in this wreck was never under the control of our tower, according to the information given me. The pilots were flying blindly and by instruments. Under no circumstances could they not take over a ship until it can be sighted. The unfortunate plane was never seen from our control tower."

Sham Nazis 'Out-Hitler Hitler' As British Repel Mock Invasion

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—Britishers reckoned today the results of a mammoth mock invasion and decided their imitation was better than anything Hitler could offer.

Informed sources said, however, that week-long exercises—held a month ago—had created a high government puzzle as to whether British officers who acted as Germans had played their part exceptionally well or whether the defending forces were not so brilliant.

Summing up the score, War Secretary Margesson told the house of commons: "There were many landings by sea and by air and the effect of continuous air bombardment over central points was estimated to have caused a breakdown of many of our means of communication. Notwithstanding this assumption of the worst, the defense organization came through the ordeal with great credit."

One informant said it "probably was more successful than anything Hitler could think up." Concern was expressed over civilian reaction. In one locality conditions of France and Belgium were almost duplicated. People clogged roads and generally harassed with defense plans. The "invaders" took advantage of this to put over some important coups.

Any material weakness exposed was declared to have given important lessons in resisting a real invader—if and when. Margesson said that a "German staff housed in special offices" was asked to "think up the most diabolical schemes the German mind could conceive."

And they did. But the final summing up of the umpires showed that all in all the "invaders" were checked.

Talmadge Lays Plans for New Guard Units To Let Cereal Authorities Decide Against Further Relaxation of Blockade.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) The British government, blocking a shipment of cereal, has decided against any further relaxation of the blockade on American food supplies for unoccupied France, it was learned today.

An effort by the American Red Cross to include 300 tons of oatmeal in a cargo of evaporated milk, children's clothing and medicines met with a refusal of British authorities to expand the scope of the existing agreement on French food supplies.

The decision apparently doomed the efforts of the French government to have frozen French assets in the United States released for the purchase of wheat here to relieve the bread shortage in France.

Gaston Henry-Have, the French ambassador, described the British attitude as "a dreadful policy" and asked Secretary Hull to intervene with British officials. Hull later talked with Viscount Halifax, the British ambassador, but said he would discuss the question with Chairman Norman Davis, of the Red Cross, before taking it up in the cabinet.

Swallows Return—Off Schedule Again SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Cal., March 7.—(AP)—The swallows have come back to Capistrano, off schedule once again. For 160 years, according to legend, the swallows have been arriving at the Mission de San Juan Capistrano on St. Joseph's Day, March 19, and departing for the south October 23.

Last autumn, however, they left ahead of time, as they had done the year before. Scout swallows arrived Monday and a much larger flock flew in on Wednesday.

Ramon Yorba, the mission sexton, has an explanation. "Perhaps," he says, "the birds know somehow that our heavy rains this spring washed away their mud nests, and that they must get here before St. Joseph's Day in order to build new homes."

Belgium Advised To Join Britain LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—Camille Huysmans, former speaker of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, recommended today that Belgium ask to be admitted to the British commonwealth of nations. Huysmans said: "In unity and only in unity will be found the strength to keep the aggressor permanently at bay."

"Belgium should ask to be admitted to the British commonwealth, and I know that there are statesmen of other smaller European nations who are thinking similarly."

Padilla Tells Senate That Bases Will Be 'American.' MEXICO CITY, March 7.—(AP) Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla told the Mexican senate today that this country would "not hesitate to sign a military pact with the United States" should an emergency arising from the present war require it.

The minister appeared at the invitation of the senate to explain Mexico's status under the Havana and Pan-American agreements and to answer questions about discussions between the two countries now in progress in Washington on the subject of possible military collaboration.

F. D. R. Pledged Yugoslav Aid, Nazis Charge

President Tried To Keep Belgrade Out of Axis, Says Newspaper.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, March 7. (AP)—Under the big headline "Yugoslavia refuses help from Roosevelt," the Nazi newspaper Magyararsag printed a dispatch under a Washington dateline today purporting to disclose that the President had attempted to keep Yugoslavia out of the Axis.

The dispatch was credited to "Special Service," and was the first such "special dispatch" the paper—long in severe financial difficulties—ever had carried under a Washington date.

"Mr. Roosevelt promised United States assistance to Yugoslavia the same day that Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic (the Yugoslavian premier and foreign minister) were received at the Berghof (Hitler's chalet) by Hitler," the "special dispatch" said.

"M. (Constantin) Fotich, the Yugoslavian minister to Washington, was summoned February 14 by urgent telephone call to go to the home of Mr. Sumner Welles, where he was given a personal message from Mr. Roosevelt."

Details of 'Offer.' The story, which was snatched up by DNB, the official German news agency, and spread throughout Europe, continued: "Mr. Fotich went to the rendezvous, and was informed that it was time to tell the prince regent and the Yugoslav government that in President Roosevelt's opinion it was time to put an end to the successes of the Axis powers even if they were only diplomatic successes."

"Mr. Roosevelt also was said to have made known that the lease-lend bill would certainly be accepted by congress and the American government then would have the means to curb efforts designed to create a new order."

"The United States would then be able to furnish efficient aid to all European states which had not already submitted to this new order."

"Mr. Welles is said to have called the tripartite pact 'very clever work, and was a most dangerous diplomatic instrument for England.'"

"Before bidding Mr. Fotich goodbye, Mr. Welles is said to have extracted a promise that Fotich would immediately transmit Roosevelt's message to Belgrade, assuring him that telegraphic rates would be reduced."

F. D. R. Convinced. "On February 10, that is several days before the proposition, the American minister to Belgrade, acting under the urgent orders of Mr. Roosevelt, is said to have gone to the Yugoslav premier's office to announce that Mr. Roosevelt was convinced of Britain's ultimate victory and that he would do everything to contribute to it."

"At the same time American diplomats accredited to Balkan capitals are said to have told Washington that Greek resistance was weakening, that war material delivered to Greece by England was without value."

"The Greek government is said to have informed the United States minister to Athens of the real situation. Thereupon, the American diplomat is said to have advised the Greek cabinet to appeal directly to the American people to obtain shipments of war materials. Conferences which were then said held in Washington broke down and ended only in the recognition that the old-fashioned machines delivered to the Greeks by Americans are of no value."

"In Washington, Roosevelt's proposition was explained by the fact that British diplomacy must use American influence to rebuild the prestige greatly diminished following the closing of the British legation in Bucharest."

'This Is Little People's War'—Lord Marley

Visiting British Lecturer Chats With Glass on World Affairs.

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Lord Marley, of England, was in Atlanta yesterday, primarily to lecture on world affairs at Emory University last night.

If I start with discussing him it's perhaps I think few Georgians know what a lord looks like, any more than I did. Though I've interviewed a few.

Lord Marley is young and better-looking than average and talks like a successful businessman from Indianapolis or Los Angeles—or Atlanta. No accent. No swank. No "haw-haw." Perhaps that's because he has been a lord only since 1930—when he was raised to the peerage for services rendered his country. His castle—if he has a castle—doesn't date from William the Conqueror. He seemed to me something like a hustling youngster with brains who'd started in as shipping clerk and rose to become president of the concern.

"Oh yes, I can tell you anything I know or think," he said. "I'm over here on no official mission. I'm on a lecture tour and hope to make some money out of it. I represent nobody but myself and my lecture bureau managers."

Claims no Authority.

He talked quite a lot about this and that, but he didn't claim to be an authority on world affairs.

"I hope there's one thing you Americans realize," he said. "That is that this is a little people's war. It is being fought not merely by cabinet ministers and generals and armies but the little people of England—who have proved they can take it and keep on taking it."

"But don't deceive yourselves into thinking they can keep on taking it indefinitely. Courage is there in plenty—but you can't keep up courage always without food and warmth and shelter."

The conversation turned on America's position in this war.

"America is supplying about 20 per cent of Britain's needs," he said. "She has been wonderful. Wonderful! The organizations for aiding Britain—Ambulances, munitions, airplanes—and the Red Cross supplies."

Sew for Red Cross.

I spoke of a group of Atlanta women I know who had been sewing for the Red Cross and making layettes for British babies who might be born in dugouts.

And how they stitched each tiny garment as lovingly and carefully as though it were for a child of their own. Looked foolish to me.

"You're wrong there," he protested. "All wrong. Think of a poor English family with a baby arriving. Bombed out of what poor shelter they had. Underfed. Cold. Seeking refuge."

"And from America comes a parcel of beautiful garments for the baby. Fit for a princess! Better than anything they'd ever seen.

"Why, there are folk across the ocean who love us and want to help us," they say. It gives them fresh courage to keep on going. It is not merely material relief—but spiritual."

Undecided.

Lord Marley hadn't made up his mind whether America should go further and actually deliver supplies into England in her own ships or provide convoys or continue the "cash and carry" system.

But he doesn't believe conveying ships across the Atlantic would necessarily involve us in the war.

"Not in the least," he said. "Look at Japan—she never has declared war on China. I think America could take a more active part without actually becoming involved."

"I've been reading, of course, your debates in congress. One point is that if you entered the war, you would need all the supplies for your own forces and England's would be cut off. That's probably true. But think of the immense power of public opinion America's entry would bring about."

"But America couldn't really be ready for two years or more. And you'd be cut off, perhaps, from your supplies in the Dutch Indies

Season's Worst Weather Seen Along Atlantic

Forty-Mile Gale, Snow To Whip New York and East.

By The Associated Press.

Wintry blasts, borne on blustery March winds from the south, drove snow, sleet and rain over the middle Atlantic states yesterday amid predictions that the section's worst weather of the season was on its way.

Winds from the north, ranging around 20 to 35 miles an hour, pushed heavy rains from the lower Mississippi valley into the south. They veered northward into Kentucky and the rain turned into sleet and snow, leading weather forecasters to issue a "heavy snow" warning from West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland northward into Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

This was accompanied by falling temperatures along the northern tier of states and a warning to shipping that winds of gale force (40 miles or more per hour) would whip the middle and north Atlantic coast.

Profits Tax Bill Signed by F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(P)—President Roosevelt today signed a bill saving corporations an estimated $23,000,000 on the new excess profits tax.

The tax, however, first of its kind since World War days, left most corporations with a huge bill yet to pay. Estimates of the tax on 1940 income range up to $1,000,000,000, but the Treasury has issued no official guess.

The amendments were designed by the Treasury and congressional committees to prevent abnormally large taxes in certain cases.

—rubber and quinine and cobra and so much else."

Lord Marley wasn't ready to say he hoped Uncle Sam would get into the fight. There were so many angles.

Majority Rules.

"But," he said, "you are a democracy. You cannot be pushed into a war by leaders—not unless the majority of your people want to get into it."

Lord Marley's talk at Emory last night was on "Peace Aims." He discussed the immense difference between democracies and dictatorships.

He has visited America often. He was a prominent member of England's labor party. Born Dudley Leigh Aman in Cheshire, he was raised to the peerage in 1930 and became one of the leaders in the House of Lords. He served in the last World War and has a son in the British service somewhere. He doesn't know exactly where.

He'd be a good scout for a chat from midnight to 3 a. m. over a succession of scotch and sodas.

Italians Relieve Ugo Cavallero, Chief of Army

General Carolo Gelloso Succeeds to Post; Greeks Advance.

ATHENS, March 7.—(P)—Foreign sources said tonight that General Ugo Cavallero, successor of Marshal Badoglio as Italian general staff chief, has been superseded as commander by General Carolo Gelloso, 11th army commander.

Whether General Gelloso was named just to command the Italian army in Albania or made chief of staff of the entire Italian army was not made clear in the Athens dispatch.

The change in the command, which, if confirmed, would be the third since the start of the Italian-Greek conflict, came as a Greek spokesman said the communiqué claimed continued advantages in skirmishes along the central sector of the front.

Greek troops have driven the Italians back from "strong and efficiently organized positions" on the central Albanian front, capturing 150 prisoners including many officers, the high command announced tonight.

"Very much material," it was added, "has fallen into our hands."

Greek aviation, the communiqué said, bombed battlefield objectives "with effective results," without the loss of a plane.

300,000 NAZI SOLDIERS REPORTED IN ITALY

NEW YORK, March 7.—(P)—The British radio announced tonight in a broadcast heard here by CBS that "a good source" reported 300,000 German troops now were in Italy and "are in control of all air fields and key positions right down to Sicily."

Strike Board Plan Studied By Roosevelt

Steel Crisis Looms as Union Spurns Compromise.

By The Associated Press.

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that he was considering establishment of a special board not only to mediate strikes but to consider production problems as well.

The President told his press conference that while he could only generalize about the board at this time, it would not be like the Taft-Walsh board of the World War, which handled labor problems through worker-employer co-operation effort. It might have, he said, a broader field.

Meanwhile, a new crisis was threatened in the steel industry and several new threats of work stoppage in defense industries flared.

Asserting that neither the 90,000 Ford Motor Company employees nor the officers of his union desire a strike, R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), said at Detroit that should the Ford management "reject our offers of conciliation, we shall strike."

The union recently filed a notice with the state labor board of intent to strike. Conciliators have been seeking a solution.

Jurisdictional Strikes.

At the same time the chief executive took occasion to express disapproval of jurisdictional strikes, which in some instances, including the CIO-AFL dispute at the Army's project at Wright Field, Ohio, have tied up national defense work.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not think the nation could approve in any shape, way or form, a jurisdictional strike. He added that such walkouts were being studied, but he did not know what might be done about them.

Mr. Roosevelt said creation of such a board would not require legislation and that it would be separate from and independent of the Office of Production Management.

New Work Stoppages.

Threats of work stoppages included action of CIO employees at the Edgewater, N. J., plant of the Aluminum Company of America, who voted to walk out unless the firm meets wage demands. The union said the vote was 1,641 to 65. There are 3,000 employees there exclusively on national defense production.

The CIO called a strike at the Detroit plant of the Federal Motor Truck Company which has $5,000,000 worth of defense orders. The plant closed when the day shift among the 600 workers walked out.

Steel Crisis Looms.

Demanding a 10-cent an hour wage increase, the CIO Steel Workers' Organizing Committee at Pittsburgh refused to accept a United States Steel Corporation compromise offer of 2½ cents and backed its rejection with a threat to terminate its contract with "big steel."

Observers noted that should the breach between the union and corporation widen, a labor crisis might develop simultaneously in both steel and coal around April 1.

Hint that a strike of school firemen and engineers in Cincinnati might spread to other fields, including organized city, county and state workers, came as school board members and labor leaders sought terms and a file threat to close two-thirds of the city's schools.

Amendment Reached.

On the brighter side, details of the agreement which averted a strike in the Consumers' Power Company, Lansing, Mich., were submitted to rank and file unionists with their leaders urging ratification.

The agreement, terms of which were kept secret, was reached following 18 hours of continuous negotiations among mediators and company and union officials.

(According to United Press, John R. Steelman, U. S. conciliation service director in Washington, recessed indefinitely the conference between International Harvester Com-

Vichy 'Rescues' Rich Cambodia From Thailand

French Offer of Corridor Saves Province in Indo-China Row.

VICHY, France, March 7.—(P)

The French government was said to be confident it had saved virtually all the rice-rich province of Cambodia, French Indo-China, in the Tokyo peace parleys with Thailand.

It was said an offer to Thailand of a corridor to the Chinese frontier had enabled the French negotiators at Tokyo to stand firm on the council of ministers' refusal to cede the rice fields of Cambodia, as demanded by Japan and Thailand.

It was believed here Japan favored the corridor plan for military reasons and would persuade Thailand to accept the counter offer.

(In Tokyo it was reported that "considerable progress" had been made toward settlement of the Thailand-Indo-China territorial dispute.)

JAPAN PROTESTS FREEZING OF INDO-CHINA FUNDS

TOKYO, Saturday, March 8.—(UP)—The Japanese press today termed the reported freezing of Indo-Chinese funds in America by the United States government as "outrageous" and implied that Japan might take action regarding the incident.

(Washington officials were unable to explain reports from Tokyo that Indo-Chinese funds had just been frozen. These funds were frozen June 17 immediately following the surrender of France.)

(Private financial circles said the only explanation they could offer was that the reports were designed for consumption in Japan and Indo-China.)

Not the Communist Way

In evaluating the actions and policies of Soviet Russia in the present critical situation in the Balkans most commentators seem to be laboring under the same mistaken theory which has been evident throughout the entire story of modern Russia and modern Nazi Germany.

Analyses of the potentialities and policies of both nations are based upon an assumption that both approach war upon the ancient basis of a struggle between the armed forces of two rival powers. Whereas, to both Hitler and Stalin such open, aboveboard war is the thing they least desire. When Britain and France declared war against Nazi Germany that was the one thing Hitler had hoped to avoid. True, he was quickly able to overrun and defeat France, but that was more because of the internal decay and dissension in the French government than because of any other reason.

It must always be remembered that the Soviet is a Communist government, dominated by men who have been educated and trained since early youth in the doctrines and, more importantly, the methods of Communism. Included in those methods is the Communists' plan for eventually taking over the entire world to their way of life.

They do not think of doing this by great clashes between armies and navies. Their method is to infiltrate, to cause discontent and rebellion among the people of the land they covet. To foment strikes and riots and uprisings. To lead desperate men into desperate adventures across the barricades around industrial plants where labor troubles have been fomented, to set class against class, interest against interest and to let the victimized nation destroy itself from inside, with the Communist vultures ready, at the opportune moment, to step in and take over the reins of control.

That, with modifications, was the Hitler plan. He wanted to swallow, one at a time, the smaller and weaker nations. His agents infiltrated into those nations, fomented dissension and unrest and riots and then he followed with his mechanized troops on the pretext of "protecting" the troubled country or of "restoring order."

Today, Germany is endeavoring to follow that same policy with the Balkan nations. Mussolini tried it, successfully, in Albania and it was only the patriotic heroism of the Greeks that saved their land from a similar fate. Mussolini expected no resistance from Greece. He expected his Fascist legions to march in and occupy the little country with scarcely the necessity of a shot. Today Hitler is hoping that, backed by the legend of German irresistibility, he can do that which Mussolini failed to do. Simply march in and take over Greece without real resistance.

He will, undoubtedly, be disappointed. But, in the meantime, Communist Russia follows the old party line and bites off, whenever it can, a slice of territory here and another slice there.

Today the Soviet is seeking naval bases from Rumania through the same method. Possibly it hopes that even Germany, so fully occupied elsewhere and fearing addition of a new enemy, will likewise give in to the demands from Moscow.

Stalin will probably get what he wants. But he will get it by taking advantage of others' troubles, by seizing the opportune moment, by sowing the seeds of internal dissension where they do not already exist.

In short, by the Communist way, which is totally removed from the way of open, army against army, warfare.

A study of some 548 case histories shows the favorite radio program of the nine-year-old listener is one beginning at the regular bedtime.

One of these days, a Geneva dispatch will quote a report from Belgrade of a rumor current in Madrid, based on a Geneva advice.

Tried on rats, a suggested remedy for baldness works out beautifully but fatally. On the other hand, is life worthwhile for a rat in a toupee?

"A plumber, working in a Denver kitchen, slipped on wet spinach and broke an arm." Gad! The stuff doesn't even provide good footing.

Another "Run Around?"

According to claims filed in New York, either the state of Georgia or some individuals representing this state, are indebted to the New York World's Fair people, as well as a Gotham hotel, a total of $41,000.

No one in this state, apparently, will assume responsibility for the unpaid debt. All individuals contacted deny liability, while both former Governor Rivers and Governor Talmadge deny the state has any obligation.

It all sounds very legal and very confusing, but in the parlance of the man on the street, it would seem that Georgia, somehow is giving these New York creditors the well-known "run around." Which is something to be deeply regretted.

Oldtimers remember how this state gave to the old battleship "Georgia" a costly set of silverware for the officers' mess and how the jeweler who was given the order later went bankrupt, chiefly because the legislature, at session after session, refused to authorize payment of the just debt.

There have been other instances in which, whether the state was justified in its attitude or not, the impression to outsiders, as well as many of our own people, was that the state was welching.

It is to be hoped that some way will be found of satisfactorily clearing up this latest claim for $41,000. If the money is not owed, that ought to be made emphatically clear. If it is, some means should be found to satisfy the New York creditors, at least for the sake of the state's good name. A good name worth many times the amount involved.

Unightly Litter

While The Constitution-sponsored Garden Contest is getting under way, it might be well to draw attention to a condition which probably contributes as much as any to unsightliness of Atlanta gardens and home lawns, yet for which the owners of said gardens are not to blame.

That is the thoughtless habit of passersby of tossing discarded paper and other trash to fall wherever it may. One sheet of old newspaper lying sodden in a corner of a hedge or garden plot can ruin the entire appearance of any place. Yet it is not difficult to find, in Atlanta, otherwise lovely places that are disgracefully littered with many forms of trash.

This is, perhaps, especially true of the many little parks which dot the city. After all, the watchful guardian of a home garden can remove such trash quickly, but in the small parks which are only visited occasionally, old papers, etc., may lie for several days before being cleared away.

This bad habit is undoubtedly due chiefly to thoughtlessness. It can easily be corrected if those guilty will only realize how their actions detract from the appearance of the city as a whole and, in future, exercise the small amount of care needed to dispose of their litter in receptacles placed for that purpose or otherwise in such places where it will not be an offense to anyone.

"To the Hearts of the People"

Grant Wood, distinguished American painter and a recent visitor in Atlanta, voiced a belief, while here, that a great wave of southern painting of genuine importance is coming soon. He bases this upon the large number of successful writers who have recently come from the south, pointing out that throughout history a surge of art has always followed a literary era in any country.

The need of a strong and healthy art in a world "hemmed in by war and destruction" was especially urged by Artist Wood.

"We need painters," he said, "who can get beyond the galleries—to the hearts of the people. We need constructive artists who can build up the morale of the nation and affirm steadfastly that when this storm is over all will be well."

There Mr. Wood touched the very core of truth in art. Unless the products of the brush or the sculptor's chisel reach the hearts of the people, they fail to be real art and become but pleasant frivolities upon the hem of life's garment.

An art that means anything, that lives, must touch the emotions and the ideals of the people. That is the place of art in life, to inspire and to teach. And, as Mr. Wood put it, such art has to "get beyond the galleries" and reach into the universal heart of all good men, everywhere.

Georgia Editors Say:

THREE IMPROVEMENTS.

(From The Waycross Journal-Herald)
State Senator H. B. Edwards lists as the biggest three needs of Georgia:

First: Abolish the allocation of state income to specific purposes.

Second: Revise qualifications for public office so as to attract the better type of businessmen.

Third: Eliminate local legislation from the state legislative duties.

We would not agree that these are the biggest three needs but we do agree that each of these represents a distinct improvement.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

TOO MANY COOKS WASHINGTON, March 7.—While the re-organized defense setup is not obvious improvement, most people familiar with the practical aspects of the problem are far from satisfied. If it does its job, the new so-called war cabinet will fill a serious want, for a body definitely empowered to consider long-term policy, judge short-term disputes, and infuse the needed energy into the entire defense effort. But the dispersion of authority and responsibility, which has afflicted the defense effort from the start, still persists under the new dispensation.

Indeed, the authority and responsibility now seem to have been dispersed more widely than ever. In the old defense commission, price, transportation, consumers and farm divisions were all gathered under the same roof with the divisions of production and raw materials. Only production and raw materials were included when the Office of Production Management was established, leaving the others out in the cold. And now, while the transportation division is expected to be moved into the OPM, the President's plan calls for transformation of the price, consumers and farm divisions into a separate agency.

The character of the new agency is easy to foresee. Its chairman will probably be the present chief of the Defense Commission price division, Leon Henderson, who started by getting on well with the businessmen in OPM, but ended by bouncing off to Florida after a dispute in the priorities committee. Unless the way of the world in Washington changes overnight, few businessmen will be found on the new agency's staff, while it will employ a good many of the ardent New Dealers who are constitutionally unable to resist the temptation to economic experimentation during the defense emergency. Again, unless there is a sudden change in the way of the world, sharp and fundamental disagreements are bound to arise between the new agency and the OPM.

DIVIDED AUTHORITY If the President had not repeatedly shown the strongest disinclination to rigid price control, the formation of such a new agency might be really alarming. As things are, it is certainly not encouraging. The experience of the last war proved, all too clearly, that efficient price controls are an essential part of efficient defense preparation. And with price controls in the hands of an agency both separate from the production agency, and altogether different in character, crippling divergencies of policy are almost certain to occur.

Meanwhile, the old division of authority and responsibility between the OPM and the Army and Navy procurement branches also continues almost as before. After a long period of such shadowiness it was quite comprehensible, the OPM-procurement relationship has now been defined in the President's executive order on purchasing. Under this order, the Army and Navy procurement officers determine what is needed, how much of it, and when. The OPM plans the production after receiving the orders and specifications from the procurement officers. American procurement officers then place the contracts, supervise the production and inspect the finished product, with OPM looking on, giving advice, and sometimes exercising a right of veto.

Under such a discontinuous system, sustained, intensive effort on a broad front is extremely difficult. The President, as it happens, is not altogether to blame. On the one hand, the officers of the Army ordnance branch are conscious of doing a good job, and are more and more conscious of the interference of untrained businessmen, and have used their powerful influence with the War Department chiefs to void being merged into the OPM organization. On the other hand, in the OPM itself, there are certain influential officials close to William S. Knudsen who fear additional responsibility, for reasons largely political and personal.

Thus, as far as the President knows, the present OPM-procurement relationship is perfectly satisfactory, although simple logic would suggest that, after the specifications for war materials have been laid down, production ought to be a continuous job. As far as ordnance is concerned, no change may be required. But because of the objections of the ordnance officers, the crucial task of getting adequate air production is also divided between many heads.

HOPKINS, BARUCH AND SMITH The new setup, the so-called War Cabinet, composed of the heads of State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments, with Harry L. Hopkins as informal secretary, is the planning and energizing body. The OPM and the new price-consumers-agricultural division agency will do their jobs side by side. In laying out this organization, besides the regular government officials and OPM members, the President chiefly consulted Hopkins, Bernard M. Baruch, who now comes to Washington once a week to give defense advice, and Budget Director Harold Smith, whose opinions are more and more influential in White House circles. The President's advisors and on the War Cabinet members will depend the success of the defense effort. The dispersion of authority and responsibility is, after all, a temporary difficulty. If the whole organization can be imbued with a spirit of emergency, now to be found in very few places in the government, all will go well in the end.

Ice Skating For Atlanta?

Saw in the sports section of last Sunday's Constitution where someone is planning to build a large ice-skating rink in Atlanta. That's good news.

What's more, there's no reason why such a place shouldn't operate and pay reasonable good dividends to its owners and operators. Of course, not so many years ago, ice skating was out of the question in this climate. But not more so than in southern California and I understand there are about 18 such rinks now operating there, profitably and usually filled to capacity.

With modern methods of insulation and air conditioning, of artificial ice manufacture, all you have to do to provide a good ice rink, even in midsummer in Atlanta or Miami or Los Angeles, is an insulated building, a place for your water, a hose to fill the place and the necessary freezing apparatus.

Will We See Hockey?

If they do build such a rink, I'm anxious about one feature. I hope they'll provide sufficient seating capacity, with good, clear views of the rink from every seat, that we may witness an occasional game of hockey on the ice, with good teams.

Hockey is the fastest of all sports, with the possible exception of jai alai, that Cuban game. And it would be a toss-up with me as to which of the two is the faster.

Hockey gets my vote because it is a team game, where jai alai is largely an individual game, like tennis or badminton, though they do play two men to a side.

If you've never seen two good hockey teams driving the puck up and down the ice, you've not seen fast sport yet. Try to follow that puck all the time and you'll be turning your head so fast you'll go home with a crick in the neck and a confusion in the eyes.

It's dangerous, too. My experiences with hockey—solely as a spectator—go back to the six youthful years I spent in Canada. In those days there wasn't so much professional hockey as today. What I witnessed, mostly, were the games between college teams.

I lived for two or three winters at Kingston, Ontario, home city of the Royal Military Academy, the West Point of Canada. Those cadets held the intercollegiate championship at hockey, among all the colleges and universities of Ontario and Quebec, year after year. They used to say that, although the cadets were good, the regulars were really as good as their record indictated. For, they said, the cadets had acquired a reputation for hard, ruthless play that was apt to intimidate opponents even before the games began. And any hockey team that goes on the ice with the slightest glimmer of fear of its substitutions is a gone gosling.

No Substitutions For Rough Play.

In hockey players are penalized for fouls or unnecessary roughness by being ordered off the ice for a definite period. One, two or perhaps five minutes. And their team must play a man short while that penalty period is on.

I've seen every man of a team out of play save the goalie, while he desperately blocked what seemed to be a couple of score of pucks flying at him from all over the rink.

A man can get hurt, badly, playing hockey. The butt end of a swinging hockey stick in the side ribs isn't pleasant. Nor is the sharp edge of a hockey skate if it happens to get through your body pads.

Didn't the Atlanta Crackers have a catcher some years back who was a hockey player in the winter months? And weren't his legs a mass of scars thereby? Seems to me I remember something about it.

Skating Is Good, Anyway.

I'd like the chance to see good hockey in Atlanta. But, selfish desires aside, it would be a grand thing for the folks of Atlanta, including all these boys of the new army and defense program who are coming to this vicinity, to have an ice-skating rink. It is one of the finest body-building exercises there is, adaptable either to the old man, or woman, who can't exert themselves much, to the youngster packed full of energy and ambition. Doctors say, too, that the dust-free atmosphere, cool and comfortable from the ice, is grand for sufferers from sinus trouble.

And, just to start folks off with the right ideas about the cool comfort of such a rink, I understand promoters of such places, especially in warmer climates—such as Atlanta—like to make it a point to open for the first time in mid-summer.

Perhaps we'll have our Atlanta rink operating by July. Let's hope so.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Editorial WASHINGTON, March 7.—Do you mind my taking up, in some detail, certain editorial reactions to a recent comment of mine on the activities of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt?

It has been intimated that, because Mrs. Roosevelt is a lady and wife of the President of the United States, good manners and good citizenship require that any discussion of her activities be couched in language less searching than would be appropriate to the activities of Burt Wheeler, for example, whose motives have been furiously impugned. Yet Mr. Wheeler is a gentleman and a senator, with a warrant from the people of his state, oft renewed, to represent them. Mrs. Roosevelt holds no certificate of election, but it seems agreed that she does partake of her husband's office, and I have heard no specific denial of the contention that she has used her position for private affairs. What she does with that gain she will not specifically say. It could be put to uses of the Commission on Youth Congress.

An important point of my discussion has been that Mrs. Roosevelt has actively participated in the drive to herd workers, against their will, into political organizations which would have the power to tax them, to limit their opportunities, to regulate their private affairs, to ostracize them forever from all employment and to prevent whole masses of them from working on national defense jobs. That has not been denied. It is merely ungentlemanly to call attention to these conceded facts.

Ineligible For Guild

I have said that Mrs. Roosevelt has no right to membership in the Newspaper Guild, which is dominated by Communists in the key offices, and that she is excused from the two most painful requirements of membership. Mrs. Roosevelt's ineligibility is plainly written in the guild constitution. The issue of Communism in the guild has been fought over in the guild itself, and a resolution to condemn Communism was defeated in the last convention. And it was agreed, by Mrs. Roosevelt's own stipulation when she joined, that she should not be required to strike or picket. I have heard no denial to these assertions. I am on the ground that proper respect for a lady and her husband's office would forbid their utterance.

It can be said further, in this connection, that the precedent of waiving the strict requirements of eligibility has permitted the New York Communists, who actually run the guild, to increase their political voting power by admitting Communists who are no more eligible than Mrs. Roosevelt.

In New York a Communist further can qualify for membership as a journalist and, in some instances, can outvote an American reporter. And the Communist party's official organ is given special immunity from the requirements by which the guild attempts to control or destroy the American press. Nobody has ever denied any of this.

Occasion Of Criticism

On the occasion in question Mrs. Roosevelt had delivered a sympathetic address to a meeting of members of the Electricians' Union in the AFL. This local a few months ago mobbed a detachment of New York police in an unprovoked riot.

It is modeled on the Communist pattern which endeavors to take over the management of industry. Its brother union in Dayton, Ohio, is the one in whose behalf the jurisdictional strike was called which is crippling a vital expansion job of the Army Air Corps.

It was in this company that the wife of the President elected to say that American workers "ought to join unions."

It was further said that because of her guild membership and her position Mrs. Roosevelt is enabled to hold press conferences which produce sympathetic publicity. It is contended that membership in the guild does not affect the obligations of a journalist, but the guild thoughtlessly threw away that argument when it required Chief Justice Hughes to quit the harmless American Press Society on the ground that he might favor that group in some hypothetical issue between the guild and the society in the future. If the chief justice could not remain impartial as an honorary member of the APS, it is inconsistent of the guild to say that active guild men, loyal to the CIO, can't even be suspected of partiality to a member of their own organization.

I said Mrs. Roosevelt was not naive that she was a clever politician of long experience and that she was actively trying to coerce American workers into collectives whose fulfillment would impose the elements of Communism and Hitlerism. I have heard, by way of reply, no denial, but only that it is bad manners thus to speak of the wife of the president of the United States.

Argentina Plan.

Argentina is launching its extensive building program to provide an improved standard of living for the working classes throughout the country. The theory of government officials in Buenos Aires is that raising the wage-earning capacity and consequent purchasing power of the people will create a demand for products to take up the slack of overseas trade.

hind him in the submarine negotiations with Germany."

"All the Georgia editors will speak at the Chautauque. Just think of it: Three hundred and fifty-nine speeches and a half."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

AID TO BRITAIN? It is my idea that the very worst sort of job has been done on selling the public the "lend-lease bill" and also on the general plan of aid to England. It has been a bad job because every organization has worked on those already sold on the idea, and has not provided, in all its setup, any plan for selling the people generally.

Aid to Britain started off with the curse of a class line drawn around it. This was not intended to be, but it was done. It just happened that, in almost every city in America, those who took charge of aid to Britain were the same persons whose pictures are on the society page and in the photo pictures. The first "aid-to-Britain" movements were dances at the country clubs and the private clubs. This served, all over the United States, to establish aid to Britain as a new and rather exclusive social organization. This was never the intention of those in charge. They had no advice and the word was to move quickly. So, it came about that, with the single exception of the state of Kentucky, where a good selling job has been done, the general enthusiasm for "aid to Britain" has been largely confined to social circles. These circles have done a good job, but they have not at all assisted the general public opinion.

In Kentucky, where Barry Bingham was made chairman, the drive was never called "aid to Britain." Bingham knew that several million Americans, for one reason or another, real or imagined, do not like England and never will. But Bingham also knew that those same millions did not care for Hitler. He pitched his campaign on a "To Hell With Hitler" basis. That caught on. The boys at the cross-roads store could understand and sympathize with that, whereas "aid to Britain" was something they maybe didn't like, and anyhow was represented to them by pictures in the society section of the city newspapers.

WHEELER'S STRENGTH On a recent trip through south Georgia I talked with people in small towns and the farms. I talked, also, with men from the small towns and the farms.

It would surprise many, although it need not, to know how many there are who believe we should keep all we make until we are prepared. And it also is surprising, although it should not be, how many there are who do not care for too close a relationship with England.

The man ploughing a small farm; the mechanic in the small-town garage; the man with the country store; the man with the filling station—all these are born isolationists.

And they are the ones who have not—generally speaking—been sold on aid to Britain. They could have been sold on it with a "To Hell With Hitler" plan. But they weren't.

There is no mystery about why Senator Wheeler and his associates are able to keep on opposing and delaying the vote on the lend-lease bill. They are opposing it because they are receiving enough public support from the people. If they were doing it on their own, without any corresponding response, they would not be carrying it on to such lengths.

It is an unwise American who pictures Wheeler and his associates as stubborn, willful men, entirely lacking in public support. I put this in just for the sake of the record. The lend-lease bill is going to pass. The majority of Americans want it to pass. But there is a good, strong minority, and it is not such a small minority as one might think, vigorously opposing the bill.

AID TO AMERICA It is my idea that we have received as much, or more aid, from England than we have given. Our contribution of destroyers was a real contribution. There was some laughing about it. This was because some stories said they were obsolete.

They were not. They were excellent destroyers, all of them reconconditioned ships of the 1920 period. The Georgia Tech NROTC had sailed in some of them. They were good destroyers and should be most effective.

The English position on the naval bases is not good. Private owners are being allowed to demand fantastic prices which are delaying acquisition. But our aid from England is largely of an intangible nature which will result in something more tangible. We are able to obtain from them information so vital to our national defense as to be priceless. The chance for our men to test British ships, sea and air; to inspect all the latest weapons and developments in materials of war; to test, as soon as we make them, some of our new guns and planes in combat—all this is invaluable aid.

This war, with its bombs and its new artillery fire, calls for new information on fuses. This country had almost no fuses, plants, and the importance of them may be seen in the news that the fuse plant near Macon is to be doubled in size. We are getting all that information.

We are getting excellent aid from England. Meanwhile, we have done a very poor job of selling to our own people "aid to England." We have bungled the job. And the reason Wheeler and his followers have been able to delay the lend-lease bill as they have may be explained by the fact that we have failed to explain to the general public why England's fight is important to us, and why it is important we help England win.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

My Dear Louise:

If I could write dialect, I would let 'old Deacon Abram diagnose your case. He would say: "Hit ain't no peace in yo' mind, and whar hit ain't no peace, hit's a misery."

The trouble with you is, you're worried in your mind. Something tells you to be up and doing, life is real, life is earnest, and you can't decide what to do—you and about ninety million other people.

Human beings can adjust themselves to anything except uncertainty. They even seem cheerful about hanging, once they get religion and make up their minds to face it.

Your Uncle Ben was like that, back in camp meeting days. He wasn't hanged, but he hung fire while others were surrendering, and it made him miserable. He always said he was happy and contented as a lost sinner, and happy still after he got religion, but the period of uncertainty, while he was making up his mind to repent, got him so confused and dissatisfied he wished he was dead.

The American people who were safe at home enjoyed the other World War. It was the big adventure of their lives. It was exciting. It gave them the feeling of comradeship—of co-operating with all of their neighbors in something big and noble. But they were happy and contented chiefly because they were free of all uncertainties. They knew they were right, and they were too busy to think about the future.

You'd expect the people of England to be in misery now, their nerves ready to break under the constant strain of threatened destruction. But they aren't. Travelers tell us they are serene and at peace. There are fewer nervous breakdowns than in normal times.

The people are cheerful because they are free of all doubts. They know they are right; they are resolved to fight to the end; nothing concerns them but doing the job. Americans—safe and free of threat—are the unhappy ones. They are troubled in spirit, as you are, because their souls are tormented by doubts. They are confused by conflicting counsel; the way ahead seems dark and uncertain; neither conscience nor desire points the way clearly, and people are miserable because their minds are sick of confusion.

Make up your mind, Honey. I can't do it for you. And you'll have no peace or self-respect until you do.

Love, DAD.

In Which Mr. Reeves Wishes-Who Doesn't?—He Owned Magic Lamp.

That old fellow, named Aladdin, was a very lucky scamp
For, according to the legend, he possessed a magic lamp
And when he desired something, be it far away or near,
He rubbed on the magic lantern and a genie would appear.
(A Genie with ability to skip from here to there
But don't confuse him with the Genie of the light-brown hair.)
And all Aladdin had to do when he was in a jam
Was to give the Genie orders and that gentleman would scam;
He could "fix" a parking ticket or return an income tax;
If Aladdin gave him orders he would give someone the axe.

These good days are gone forever, we shall see them not again,
And the lamp Aladdin burnished rusts somewhere in Limbo's Lane,
But I often wish I had it when I feel inclined to go
For an evening's entertainment at a moving picture show
I would take the magic lantern, and when some unkind dub
Poked his toes where I was sitting I would summon up my Genie, I would whisper in his ear
"See that mug that's just behind me; throw the bucket out of here."
Or I'd point to someone near me, crumpling pop-corn in his cravat,
As I bellowed: "See him, Genie, see if you can crack his jaw."

If I only had a lantern I could make my dreams come true,
There's not space to tell the story of the things which I would do
I would send for Mussolini while my Genie gets some ants
And we'd dump the whole kaboodle in the bosom of his pants.
If I only had the lantern I could sing a song of glee
But if some one else should get it...
Wonder what they'd do to me!

Apple Juice.

All I know about groceries and kindred products is what my household boss tells me.
But she acquired, a short time ago, a taste for apple juice, which I used to know as sweet cider.
And she says that in shopping around, buying this and that for a sometimes hungry husband, she found that apple juice, put up in Georgia, costs one dollar per gallon while apple juice from Oregon—or Washington state or somewhere up there—can be had for 30 cents per gallon.
Far be it from me to start a fuss about home products. But how come?

You may, or may not, wonder which apple juice she bought. You can write your own answer to that.
On the heels of a story I wrote about Jekyll Island, the multi-millionaires' retreat just off Brunswick, comes the Saturday Evening Post with pictures by its color picture expert and a brief article—the first "authorized" pictures—Which arouses no canker of jealousy in my bosom. Nor in Kenneth Rogers—who does the finest landscape stuff in the country. Both of us have tramped over Jekyll at various times—and Kenneth had shot pictures a-plenty. But in summer time, when reporters and photographers were protected by the game laws.
SEP story and pictures were interesting—mildly. But you can have such a better time there when the Morgans and the Astors and the Drexlers are not in residence. Of course, you don't get any close-ups of Gloria van Gloomed III, but there are thousands of better looks just across the bay at St. Simon. With no bodyguards.

"And Obey? No!"

Picked up from an insurance magazine:
"In few marriage ceremonies of today can the word 'obey' be found. Because it was useless or because it made brides untruthful, I can't say.
"Sarah Harrison when marrying James Blair in June, 1878, was the first woman to refuse to make the promise to 'obey,' says the item.
"The minister tried three times to get her promise and each time she refused, and no happier couple was ever known. They were buried side by side on Jamestown island, and during the years a sycamore tree grew up between the graves and has sundereed them apart, thus doing in death what the legend says her father could not do in life, separate them."

Sing a song of cellophane; it never tears nor rips; why don't all the nations use it to plate their ships?

The Gentleman—

From Schley ... From Cherokee ... From Dooly ...

Representative J. O. Smith, of Schley

Representative J. O. Smith, of Schley county, Ellaville, is engaged in the sawmill business. He is also a farmer and came to serve in the legislature for his first time two years ago. The solon has no hobbies, he says, for he has never had time for anything but work and a little fishing. He thinks education should come ahead of everything.

Representative Fred Wilbanks, of Cherokee

Representative Fred Wilbanks is first-termer who left his work as a farmer and dairyman to come to the general assembly. He has 1,400 acres of land on which he raises feedstuff for his 200 cattle and 200 hogs. He is most interested in agriculture and highways, spends his free time hunting and fishing and plans to introduce a few local bills before the lower body. He is 41, married, and has five children.

Representative V. C. Daves, of Dooly

Born in Fannin county, Dr. V. C. Daves made to Dooly when as a young man he took up the practice of medicine. He served in the house of representatives in 1937-38, the senate in 1939-40, and is now back in the house again. He is actively connected with politics and has been all his life, mostly for other people, he says. The 52-year-old solon is married and has no children.

Redwine Plans To Hold Senate In Afternoons

Rules Committee To Take Over Calendar To Speed Work.

The state senate, in all probability, will add afternoon sessions next week in an effort to wade through an already full calendar which grows larger each day as bills come over from the house for concurrence.

Only two more weeks are left in the present term, and senate President Charles D. Redwine announced at adjournment time yesterday that he would ask for all-day meetings next week and then called for the rules committee to take over the calendar Monday morning.

Can Control Bills.
As chairman of the now-powerful rules committee, Redwine and his associates can determine which bills will be sent to the senate floor and in what order they will be discussed. The house rules committee already has taken over in the lower chamber.

Action Postponed.
Administration leaders in the upper house postponed action on the Talmadge sponsored bill to abolish county boards of public welfare and provide that county welfare directors be appointed by the state director with the consent of the Governor.

A storm of opposition arose around the bill when it came to the floor Thursday morning. However, adjournment time halted discussion and it became the first order of business yesterday morning.

Opposition Cited.
Floor Leader Homer Edenfield asked unanimous consent to postpone action because 11 senators were absent. Among them were many administration supporters. The request was granted.

The bill also reduces county obligations in welfare work from 10 per cent to 5 per cent and takes the 5 per cent on to the state's 40 per cent obligation. The remainder is paid by the federal government.

Opposition was based on the opinion of Senators Lanier and McGehee that the bill tended to take welfare control away from the counties and centralized it in the state office.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Sunday's lesson, Luke 20:9 through 21:38, is the story of how certain people rejected Jesus Christ, and the suggestion of how many today are rejecting Him. It is a depressing picture which Luke, the gifted and consecrated physician, paints. It is always depressing to witness people turning away from the Lord and Savior.

It was Tuesday of Crucifixion Week. The scene was the Temple in Jerusalem. Jesus, for the last time in His earthly ministry, presented Himself to His own people as their promised Messiah; whereupon they firmly and definitely rejected Him.

In this tragic and dramatic scene, Jesus told them a parable—always one of His chief methods of driving home an eternal truth. It is the parable of the wicked husbandmen, Luke 20:9-18. The parable reaches its climax in these words of Jesus:

"The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner. Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but whosoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder."

Now note the reaction of those who rejected Him:

"And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on Him; but they feared the people, for they perceived that He had spoken this parable against them. And they watched Him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of His words, that so they might deliver Him unto the power and authority of the governor," Luke 20:19-20.

Why did they reject Jesus? Why do people reject Him today? These are questions which every Sunday school teacher, every preacher, every Christian, often ask.

There is no patent answer, covering the entire group. Perhaps we might say, in one word, that it is a question of unbelief. But even then one will need to pray—study every individual to discover, if possible, what is responsible for that attitude of unbelief—what it is that closes the individual's eyes to the way of salvation.

And in this effort to discover why people reject Jesus as Savior and Lord, we shall be wise if we go to the Bible for instruction. Study, for example, the many instances in the Old and New Testaments in which people came face to face with God, but turned away—study the apparent reason. Such study will help us to understand those who today reject Him.

Realizing the destiny-determining significance of rejecting Christ, may we prayerfully and earnestly seek, by the Spirit's power and direction, to help those about us to accept Him.

Senate Approves Sidewalk Paving

The State Highway Department is authorized to pave sidewalks adjacent to Georgia roads outside of city limits in a bill by Senator Pat Campbell, of Covington, which passed 32-0 in the senate yesterday.

A section of the proposal also permits the department to pave sidewalks and lay curbing along the highways which run through unincorporated communities, "as the needs may require for the safety and protection of the pedestrians."

Two Defense Bills Vetoed By Talmadge

Both Measures Had Passed General Assembly by Large Majorities.

Two of four national defense bills, passed by overwhelming majorities by the general assembly at the suggestion of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, were vetoed yesterday morning by Governor Talmadge.

He declined to comment on his objections to the measures, but said he would prepare a veto message over the weekend and send it to the senate and house Monday morning.

According to sources close to the Governor he is expected to ask, in his veto message, that the general assembly amend the two bills by placing a time limit on them.

Speech Teachers Study Theater
The different phases of the theater were discussed yesterday during the second day of the annual meeting of the Georgia Association of Teachers of Speech, held at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

"Marionettes" was the subject discussed by Mrs. Ruth Simonson, of Wesleyan College, is president, and Mrs. W. W. Davison, of Atlanta, is vice president of the association.

Tax on Out-of-the-State Produce Trucks Sought
Trucks hauling farm produce into Georgia from another state would be required to pay special license taxes under a bill submitted to the house yesterday.

Representative Bynum, of Rabun, proposed to set of scale of taxes from $10 to $300, depending upon the horsepower of truck motors.

A section permits the state revenue commissioner to adjust these license fees "to the equivalent of, but not less than, the amount of license fee tax required by other states on motor vehicles transferring products."

Special Policemen.
The second measure vetoed by the Governor authorized the appointment of special policemen to guard and protect state property which lies in other states. It was designed specifically to set up a police protection for the Georgia-owned Western & Atlantic railroad properties in Chattanooga.

In the senate the bill passed 28-8 and was indorsed in the house by a 115-5 vote.

Mrs. Coxon, the only woman senator, was confined by illness to her hotel room yesterday but she said she could not understand the Governor's objection to the measures. Arnall was in Reidsville and could not be reached for comment.

WOMEN VOTERS HEAD WANTS CO-EDUCATION

Editor Constitution: We notice that the question of co-education in Atlanta high schools is again becoming of interest to the public. The Atlanta League of Women Voters for many years has advocated co-education for our high schools.

From the United States Bureau of Education bulletin of 1925-26 we learn that in this country there are over 20,000 high schools, only 127 of which are segregated, or not co-educational. Of these 127 segregated schools 70 were vocational or listed as specializing in one field or another. There are no more recent figures published by the United States Bureau of Education because from that time on there were so few segregated schools that the bureau did not keep the statistics.

We in Atlanta belong to the extreme minority. In a country which believes in the rule of the majority, we should feel our educational loneliness.

Educators now generally agree that education is living, not just preparation for living, and for boys and girls to be segregated in high school is an unnatural situation, unlike real life. The question of study habits being better in the segregated high schools is inconsistent, since our Atlanta kindergarten through junior high, and one of our high schools is co-educational. Of course, all the Fulton county high schools are also co-educational.

The segregation of the high schools has needlessly complicated the transportation problem. Girls living on the north side must travel across the city to reach their school, and the boys on the south side must do the same.

The present system of education in Atlanta is an archaic hangover from the early days when girls were not allowed higher education. It is a very beautiful thing that those of us who have had happy days at any school cherish some precious memories of that school and so we sing the praises of our Alma Maters. This is all well and good but such sentiments and loyalties should not stand in the way of the progress of the present school generation.

MRS. J. D. THOMAS,
President Atlanta League of Women Voters.

GARMENT WORKERS PROTEST TWO BILLS

Editor Constitution: Our organization, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, has 262,000 members throughout the United States; of America, 1,000 members in Atlanta, and a large number throughout Georgia. Our relationships with employers have been most honest and progressive, and we feel sure they will be glad to affirm same.

Our aims are to uphold our rights as citizens and to abolish drudgery of sweatshops, establish decent working conditions, and promote business enabling us to have more work.

Mr. Pickett's bill in the house of representatives and Mr. Edwards' in the senate constitute what to us, if passed, would be a "regime of state dictatorship," for any man or woman who goes on any pay roll of dress shops, hosiery mills or textile factories.

Who feels it their duty other than these members of the state assembly to say to labor organizations, "You must charge this, and spend same for that?"

Mr. Pickett must have had an enormous amount of experience in labor relations, since he knows shop conditions well enough to say the employer must have notice weeks in advance before a strike can be called. The strike is labor's only weapon, and these gentlemen would take that away.

We wonder if either of these two men have ever seen inside of a dress shop or factory. We would consider it a pleasure to accompany either of them through the garment industry in Atlanta to actually see how the dress industry operates, and under what conditions, which are far behind many industries.

We have come from 60 hours for $5 and $6 per week in 1933, to the present 35-hour week at 60 cents an hour. Our employees are still in business, and they have not moved to less expensive residential sections.

The 1,000 dressmakers of Local 122, I. L. G. W. U. in Atlanta and members throughout the state, rise in protest against these bills introduced by Mr. Pickett and Mr. Edwards.

Our membership of Local 122 is composed of citizens, taxpayers, and 92 per cent of registered voters, with relatives and friends in every county, district or community throughout Georgia who are daily pledging their support to our membership against these bills in the state assembly.

CHAIRMAN HONORED—Mrs. B. L. Weinberg (left), garden chairman of the P-T. A. of North Avenue school, at Hapeville, was honored when members of the Parent-Teachers' Association presented a tree to the school, in recognition of the outstanding work which she has done with the school's portion of the Hapeville City Park. The tree was planted in the park. Participating in the ceremony, in addition to Mrs. Weinberg, were Miss Josephine Wells, principal of the school, and Mrs. Ralph Anderson, president of the P-T. A. The school garden in the park has been entered in The Constitution's annual Yard and Garden Contest.

Yard, Garden Contest Entry Time Extended

the contest entry dates should be extended another week."

The decision to extend the entry date in no way affects the people who have already joined the contest. Judges will begin making their preliminary survey of contest properties next week as was originally planned, and gardens which are entered in the contest next week will be visited a few days later than those of contestants who have already sent in their entry blanks.

How To Enter.
The garden department will continue to take entries over the telephone, and contestants may enter the contest by calling the garden contest director at Walnut 6565. Entries also may be sent by mail or may be made in person at The Constitution offices.

The contest, a project to foster civic beautification, involves improvement made in property during the 1941 growing season. Houses and buildings will not be judged in the contest, but all the property surrounding the buildings will be included.

This is more than a flower-growing contest. Vegetable gardens, lawns, outdoor grills, playgrounds and other land put to special use will contribute to the total score, if they are maintained properly.

A convenient entry blank will be found in this issue of The Constitution. Clip it and send it to the garden department, or telephone for information about the competing property.

Georgia Oil, Minerals Survey Asked In Bill

A resolution requesting Secretary of the Interior Ickes to authorize surveys of reported oil and mineral deposits in the second congressional district was offered yesterday by Senator Benton Odum Jr., of Newton.

Ordered to lie on the table one day, the resolution asks that surveys be made especially to determine if manganese, chromite, bauxite or oil exists in the second district in sufficient quantities to make development advantageous for national defense.

Southern Loop Pitchers To Find Marshall Tough This Season

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Prize Lefty ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 7.—Elwood Lawson showed up at camp with the lean, hungry look of a fighter. He had been working on the railroad all winter. No white-collar job for Lawson. He was a laborer on the railroads in Louisiana.

Lawson, a wiry left-hander, worked on the batters of the Georgia-Florida League last summer. He appeared in more than 50 games for Waycross. And he just missed winning 30 games. His regular season record was 26 won and 7 lost. He won three more games in the play-off to boost his winnings to 29.

It was his second year with Waycross. Lawson won eight games the year before. That was his first year of professional baseball. And in his second year he was a sensation.

Doesn't matter if you're pitching in Class X. When you win 29 games in a season you've done something, you've really got something.

And that's how it is with Lawson. He is an unusual rookie. He won 29 games in a fast Class D league and showed iron-man tendencies in appearing in over half a hundred games.

The jump from D to A-1 is considerable, but now and then a player comes up with the stuff to bridge the gap.

Lawson may be one of those players. He had the stuff to set Georgia-Florida League batters on their ears and it might be good enough to fool the cagier batters of the Southern League.

He Can Travel Pete Thomassie, another New Orleans boy who starred for Waycross, will make a strong bid for an outfield berth.

Thomassie, a sawed-off, hammered-down type of athlete, was voted the most valuable player in the Georgia-Florida League. Colored fans liked him so well they gave him a watch at the end of the season. A highly colorful performer, Thomassie batted .333, finishing fourth in the league. He is tremendously fast and was used in center field at Waycross.

The way the Crackers look at it—Thomassie will be valuable insurance if Buddy Bates' eyes go bad and he has the trouble batting that he did last year.

Fine Scouting Scout Dutch Dietrich has done his work well. There are more good New Orleans boys in the camp of the Crackers than there are in the camp of New Orleans in the Crescent City.

The Crackers have nine fine New Orleans boys. They include Lawson, Thomassie, Rene Cortes, Emile Lochbaum, Russ Bevell, Ulysses Wattigny, Joe Gautreaux, Connie Ryan and Elmer Blair, brother of Al, who is playing with Boston.

If the Crackers had signed on Scout Dietrich a year sooner, Harold Pollett, the leftie who won 20 games for Houston last year, would have been a Cracker. Dietrich was working for St. Louis then.

When a club works independently, as does the Atlanta club, it is necessary to sign exceptional young talent. Hence the percentage of good young talent is a lot higher on the Atlanta club than it is on clubs which take prospects on a wholesale scale.

Likes Cortes Earl Mann, who isn't often fooled on prospects, tabs Rene Cortes as a future big league pitcher. Cortes, who is not yet 19, came to the Crackers as a sandlotter.

He has spent a season in Class D and is back for another trial, taller and stronger. He is 15 pounds heavier than he was a year ago. He is six feet tall. Mann was looking over players during one of the practices and his eye caught Jimmy Pette, the shortest shortstop the Crackers have had in camp in the last half a dozen years. He is shorter than Chatham. And not quite as stoutly built. But he is a fielding fool.

"Say," Mann declared, "that boy may turn out to be the shortstop."

"Oh, no," responded a listener, "it's too great a jump for a raw recruit."

"I don't know," Mann answered. "You haven't forgotten about Willard Marshall, have you? After the way Marshall came through without any experience, anything can happen."

The Crackers are fortunate to start another season with Marshall. Several times the club was on the verge of selling him. If any major league club had offered the right players in exchange, a deal would have gone through.

Bowling Meet Attracts Many Non-Leaguers

Constitution Doubles Based on Handicaps; Equal Chance to All.

Entry lists at the Lucky Strike, Palace and Bowling Center alleys are rapidly filling for the ninth annual Atlanta Constitution St. Patrick's Day doubles tournament. Many bowlers who do not participate in a regular weekly league are putting their names on the dotted line.

In this great tournament no entry fee is charged. You pay only for the cost of games bowled. You may bowl at your favorite alley at a time most convenient to you, starting at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, or later at 1:30 or 3 p. m. in the afternoon or still later at 7:30 p. m. in the evening.

You may choose your own partner, and your combined averages figured from 240 men and from 210 for women will determine your handicap. Every team has an equal chance with this handicap, the stars with very little handicap will have to bowl high scores to overcome the 75 or more pins handicap that the average bowler will be given to start with. Mr. Average Bowler, with his penchant for throwing in one big game will be decidedly favored in this test of skill.

The Constitution doubles affords the highest type of fast scoring tournament play. No entry fee and put on an equal basis with handicaps, it is the bowling bargain of the year.

Jabbing Soose Defeats Vigh In 12-Round Go

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—Behind a left jab that struck with all the poison and precision of a rattlesnake, Billy Soose, of Farre, Pa., fought his way to a second straight decision over Ernie Vigh, of Newburgh, N. Y., in their 12-round return bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Soose weighed 162 1-2, Vigh 160 1-2.

A month to the night after he had won a disputed verdict over the stocky butler from the Hudson river valley, Soose left no doubt at all of his superiority as he dropped Vigh for a count of six with a smashing right in the first round and went on from there to pile up a tremendous advantage on points. The Associated Press scorecard showed nine rounds for Soose, two for Vigh (the second, when he made a fine recovery, and the sixth), and one even, the seventh. The victory clinched a shot at Ken Overlin, middleweight titleholder.

Best Bird Dog Still Unnamed As Finish Nears

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., March 7.—(AP)—Unperturbed by a drizzling rain, Homewood Flying Dutchman, a veteran pointer, slogged through the muddy acres of the Hobart Ames plantation in impressive style today to make his bid for the coveted National Field Trials championship.

Put down with Yankee's Jake, another pointer, the Dutchman proved a better mudder than his brace mate, uncovering six beavies and a pair of singles. He ran a caggy race and finished strong but marred his performance with two unproductive points.

Jake, apparently off his usual form, faded from the championship picture by running a ragged heat. He fought his handler's whistle from the start and showed signs of illness before the midway mark. Jake showed on game three times and failed to produce a bird on a fourth point. Jake is owned by Dr. P. T. Kilman, Malakoff, Texas. His brace mate is the entry of Euclid Claussen, of Augusta, Georgia.

At the end of the trials approached, followers of the ancient classic still were unable to predict confidently the 1941 bird dog champion.

The afternoon run braced Rockabye Baby, one of three entries of the New York sportsman A. G. C. Sage, and Wayside Pat M., owned by J. N. Edens Jr., of Corsicana, Tex.

Pat, who earned his way into a second series before bowing out of the title picture last year, ran a steady race, but his bird work fell short of championship caliber. Rockabye Baby, known for her nimble, ground-eating gait, ran so wide this afternoon she was out of hand for an hour and 21 minutes. She uncovered four beavies.

Earl Dixon, of Atlanta, on Team Which Will Seek N. Y. Titles.

The southeastern golden gloves boxing champions will leave today for New York, where they will compete in the national golden gloves tournament of champions, opening for three days Monday at Madison Square Garden.

Major Charles Dunn, athletic officer at Fort McClellan, and his assistant, Joe Montagnino, will have charge of the team composed of Earl Dixon, Atlanta, flyweight; Woodrow Womack, Fort Benning, bantamweight; George Lockwood, featherweight, and James Wismer, welterweight, of Pensacola; four from Fort McClellan, Arthur Burke, lightweight; Henry Heppy, middleweight; Philip Raggazino, lightweight, and Arthur Ramsey, heavyweight.

Earl Dixon's father is paying the expenses of Earl's dusky trainer, LeRoy Adkinson. Dixon is going back for the second year with his eye on making the New York team, which is scheduled to meet a team from Chicago a week later. Experts pick Dixon, Ramsey, and Raggazino as the best bets to come through. Raggazino is a two-time former national champion.

Jockey Eads Is Badly Hurt In Race Spill

MIAMI, Fla., March 7.—(AP)—Jockey Wendell Eads, Florida's leading apprentice rider, suffered a fractured skull, fractured shoulder and serious internal injuries in a first-race spill at Tropical Park today.

Jockey Ted Atkinson, who fell in the same accident, was less seriously hurt with a possible concussion. Eads was still unconscious at University hospital an hour and a half after the mishap. Eads' mount, Miss Victory, appeared to stumble about 30 yards from the finish line directly in the path of Moonful, ridden by Atkinson.

The veteran Eddie Arcaro was suspended for 10 days on a rough-riding charge after he piloted Iron Will to third place in the second race. Two other horses were bumped.

Jockey Don Meade got a triple by winning the third, fourth and seventh events. On Top Call, in the form, he defeated favored Bad Cold and paid $10.70 for $2. In the fourth he brought in Remarkable in the six furlongs with the fast time of 1:10 3-5, paying $9.30 for $2. He took the seventh with Ida Rogers, paying $17.20.

Brumbelee Leaves For Training Camp

Charlie Brumbelee, Atlanta boy who was voted the most valuable rookie in the International League last year, should be in great shape when he reports to the Rochester minor league training camp in West Palm Beach tomorrow.

Official training doesn't begin then, but Charlie, who will leave Atlanta tonight, has been keeping his weight down and his legs in shape for weeks by running at Adair park.

The youngster who won 18 and lost 11 games for the Double-A club last year, his second in professional baseball, was bubbling over with enthusiasm as he packed for the trip to training camp.

Pro Basketball Is Here To Stay; Makes Big Hit

Kautsky's All-American and Jewell Young Talk of Town; Big Attractions Loom for Next Year.

By THAD HOLT.

This basketball season is very gray about the temples, but the old boy has had one of his most interesting and successful campaigns in our neck of the woods.

Top spot of the year's court play was the professional basketball game featuring the Original Celtics and Kautsky's All-Americans, which was witnessed by a wild-eyed, screaming throng at Warren Arena Thursday night.

Of that game one significant and definite thing may be said: professional basketball is made in Atlanta, Georgia. It has come and it is here to stay.

It took but one look to convince Georgians that here, at last, was the real thing. On all sides one hears praise unrestrained for the play of the teams and their individual stars.

MUSTA LIKED IT. "I'd give four dollars, five dollars, even pawn my watch to see another game like that," one fan bubbled, as he left the arena.

That expression just about told the story of the entire crowd's reaction. There never has been anything like the reception Atlanta gave the pros.

Said Dave Driscoll, of Decatur: "I have lived and played for years in Indiana, where basketball players are a dime a dozen," but never have I seen anything to approach this Jewell Young, of Kautsky's. I didn't know an athlete could reach such heights in any sport. Young alone was worth the price. He is all and more that press agents said he was."

The All-Americans are not necessarily a better team than the Celtics. These rivals had broken even prior to Thursday night. But this time Bobby McDermott, their long-shooting ace, was bottled up, and when he did get a shot, his usual unerring marksmanship was off line.

FAST AND CLEAN. However, the Kautsky lads, with their fast-breaking, clean-cut style of play, made a tremendous hit. They play the game for all its worth. And that Jewell Young...

The people who promote in Atlanta are aware that a return game would be a sell-out. They know it couldn't miss. But, unfortunately, such a thing is highly unlikely. The Kautskys will enpear to the world's professional tournament at Chicago on March 15. By that time it will probably be too late for them to return here.

But there will always be a next year and when it comes, Georgians may expect bigger and better attractions. Atlanta is going to become one of the basketball centers of the universe. All the great professional teams and many of the leading college fives such as Long Island, N. Y., will perform in our town.

Ideas are being born. Atlantans who have confidence in what the future holds are making plans. A gigantic new sports arena in the heart of downtown Atlanta may greet sports fans by next winter. Basketball in the south is just beginning to grow. The city auditorium will have a portable hardwood floor and there will be glass backboards, so that those who sit behind the goals can see the action.

Louise Suggs Bows to Wall In Semi-Finals

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 7.—(AP)—Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. D., and Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., today won their way into tomorrow's finals of the Florida East Coast Women's Golf tournament.

Miss Tainter, western junior champion, upset Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., the medalist, 3 and 1. In the semi-finals and Miss Wall played near-par golf in eliminating Louise Suggs, Georgia state champion from Lithia Springs, 2 and 1.

Miss Wall posted a 38, one over men's par, on the front line to lead Miss Suggs two up at the turn.

Hudson Scores 20 Points in 34-23 Victory Over Shamrocks.

Paced by Ouida Hudson, who heated the hoops with 20 points, Washington Seminary last night defeated North Avenue Presbyterian school, 34 to 23, in the annual classic between these old rivals at Henry Grady court.

With NAPS beaten by a wide margin, the game was more of a personal shooting contest between Eleanor Kent and Hudson. Kent, who has a three-year average of over 20 points a game, managed to tally 17 in the face of tight guarding.

The Seminary got away to a fast lead and was ahead, 18-7, at the half. After intermission, the Shamrocks came back, threatening several times, but never managing to materially cut down their opponents' advantage.

Calloway backed Hudson with eight points and Harland had six. Rae, with two, Thomas with three, and Evans, with one, accounted for the NAPS' scores not made by Kent.

This game, played before a packed house, closed the season for both teams.

Two Records Set In Baltimore Meet

BALTIMORE, March 7.—(AP)—Big Al Blozis and Mortimer Alnowick, Georgetown University teammates, sent the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment indoor games off to a spectacular start tonight by setting new meet records in the shot-put and the 440-yard dash.

Blozis, not pressed and apparently merely warming up for tomorrow's Knights of Columbia games in New York, heaved the 16-pound shot 54 feet, 10 inches, breaking his own mark of 53 feet, 1 inch, set here a year ago in the A. A. U. division.

Leading from the start, Alnowick broke the tape fully 20 yards ahead of Werner Brown, of Duke, to win the collegiate 440 in the record time of 50.9 seconds.

High Fast One Will Not Fool Ace Outfielder

Petroskey Is Air Corps Victim; Pitching Selections Puzzle Richards

By JACK TROY.

ST. AUGUSTINE, March 7.—When Southern League pitchers start firing high fast stuff at Willard Marshall this summer they'll find him in a position to hit it.

Because the pitchers worked on him so much with slow, low pitches, Marshall got in a habit of leaning over at the plate. He got so he wasn't looking for high, fast stuff and when certain Southern league pitchers tried pitching him high, they were successful in getting him out.

JEFFCOAT'S GOAT.

George Jeffcoat, of Nashville, was particularly effective against Marshall. But for that matter Jeffcoat was a nemesis for most of the Crackers.

Manager Paul Richards has changed Marshall's position at the plate. He is having him stand up straighter. In this way he is in a position to hit either low or high stuff. You can stand up straight and bend over to hit low stuff, but you can't be bent over and straighten up in time to hit a high fast ball.

It really is a very simple thing, but it has meant the difference of a lot of extra base hits for Marshall. Southern league pitchers will find him hard to fool henceforth.

PITCHER PROBLEM.

When cutting down time comes in a few weeks, Manager Richards is going to have a problem deciding how many pitchers to carry for the first 30 days.

From last year's squad there's Emile Lochbaum, Wayman Kerkisick, Jennings Pindexter and Charlie Burgess. Newcomers Ed Heusser and Allyn Stout are established performers.

So with that six pretty sure to stick this leaves only three places, at the outside, open for the large group of promising rookies, boys like Ed Nowak, Elwood Lawson, Bob Chipman, Rene Cortes, and so on.

A club is allowed to carry 19 players for the first 30 days. So if the Crackers decided to carry nine pitchers. There would be room on the roster for only 10 other players—four infielders, three outfielders and three catchers.

CHANCES ARE. Chances are Richards may choose eight pitchers and carry three catchers for the first month. Or he might carry two pitchers.

Georgia Events To Clash Today

'Reds,' 'Whites' Will Feature First 'G' Day

Sinkwich Must Run Against Big, Slashing Line at Athens.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY, Assistant Sports Editor. ATHENS, Ga., March 7.—It will look like mid-November tomorrow afternoon in Sanford Field stadium when Georgia's football warriors battle it out in a Bulldog against Bulldog game at 3 o'clock (EST).

In addition to two class-dressed teams on the field, there will be a pair of bands, a corps of guy and gal cheer-leaders and several thousand spectators in the stands, provided, of course, the weather is passable.

Coach Wallace Butts has divided his squad of some 60 boys into two teams, the "Reds" and the "Whites." They are as evenly matched as can be with two Frankie Sinkwiches. Flashy Frankie will be at the tailback position for the "Reds," but he will be up against a big, slashing forward wall which the "Whites" believe will stop him.

BIG ORDER. That's a pretty big order, considering the fact a good many college teams tried the same thing last season without success.

The game is the feature of the annual "G"-day program. There will be a dance tomorrow night and numerous other festivities with fraternities and sororities co-operating.

Admission is 50 cents to the game and the dance is free. All proceeds will go to the Georgia Boosters' Club—an organization supporting athletic programs at the university.

Of the 22 probable starters in the grid battle, 10 will be sophomores. And all 10 have shown a lot of promise in the past six weeks of spring practice.

ENDS AND CENSERS. Sophomore centers and ends will be most numerous with all four ends and both pivots having yet to play in their first varsity game. Duck Conger and John Brown, ex-Boys' High stars, will start at the flanks for the Reds.

Bill Godwin and Clyde Ehrhardt will start at the center positions. Other soph starters will include Red Boyd at guard for the Whites, Joe Pollock blocking back for the Whites, Dick McPhee at fullback for the Whites and J. C. Miller, at wingback for the Reds.

LUMPKIN-HARTMAN. Assistant Coach Quincy Lumpkin will have charge of the Reds while Backfield Coach Bill Hartman will handle the Whites. The game will conclude six weeks of drills for the Bulldogs.

There is an intense interest among fans and a keen rivalry among the players of both teams. Red assumed there will be no punches pulled, even though they are playing against teammates.

Probable lineups: WHITES: Pos., Anderson; End, Horns; Guard, Ehrhardt; Center, Elliott; Fullback, Miller; Quarterback, McPhee; Running back, Sinkwich; Tackle, Tink.

Miley Captures Lakeland Event

LAKELAND, Fla., March 7.—(P)—Marion Miley, long-driving Lexington, Ky., star, withstood a closing rally by Mrs. Mark McGarry, of St. Petersburg, Fla., to win the seventh annual Lakeland Women's Invitational golf tournament finals today, 2 and 1.

Miss Miley, media shot at the turn of the 18-hole match, but saw Mrs. McGarry, former Southern and state champion, cut this margin in half on the home nine.

Miss Miley had a card of 39-40—79, compared with 43-38—81 for Mrs. McGarry.

Marshall Due To Be Tougher

Including himself, and four outfielders.

The Crackers have all kinds of talent. The weather has been fully as good as the Crackers ever had at Savannah, and the squad is quickly rounding into shape. Most of the soreness and stiffness is gone now, and another week of such weather will find pitchers all ready.

The army took another Cracker player, Mike Petrosky, today. President Eberhart received a letter from Petrosky in which the big right-hander said he would be inducted into the air branch of the service on March 19.

ALL ON HAND. So the entire squad of pitchers now is on hand. Joe Gautreaux, one of the young pitchers from New Orleans, celebrated his 18th birthday today.

John Gerlach, who is expected to be the regular shortstop, arrived after practice today and will report for duty tomorrow.

GOODWIN WINS. PALM BEACH, Fla., March 7.—(P)—Tommy Goodwin, of New York, won the Palm Beach golf tournament today by defeating Smiley Quick, of West Palm Beach, 6 and 4, in the 36-hole final.

Pups, Derbies Run Today in Atlanta Trials

30 Dogs Compete in Two Events Staged at Fears' Farm.

By JOHN MARTIN. The Atlanta Field Trial Club will need only a break from the weatherman to stage its greatest trial in the organization's history today and tomorrow over the course at Fears' Farm near Hampton.

Club officials cast anxious eyes at the skies last night and hoped that the prediction of cloudiness and low temperatures meant only that, and no rain.

A record entry for the fifth annual spring trials was assured at the completion of drawings in the three events. Sixteen puppies and 14 derbies will go down today, with just as bulky a field of all-age pointers and setters scheduled to run tomorrow.

Two Atlanta puppies will be put down in the first brace today. Ray Carter will handle E. W. Carter's Rose Dot in the 30-minute heat with Pal's Elakonee Zax, owned and handled by J. W. Huey. Eight braces will run in this junior waltz and in the afternoon Duke of Chatham, owned and handled by J. W. Huey, will open the derby stake. Six more braces will run in this class, setting the stage for Sunday's seasoned dogs.

A large gallery is expected and braces and results will be announced over a loud speaker, a field trial innovation.

Wildlife Unit's Ex-Cashier Is Indicted Here

Department of Audits Examiner Also Faces Fulton Charge.

A former cashier of the state wildlife division and the chief examiner of the state department of audits were named in separate indictments yesterday by the Fulton grand jury.

B. M. Johnson Jr., who was cashier of the wildlife division of the natural resources department, was charged in a true bill with embezzlement of $1,833 of state money.

LeRoy Pharr, 62, the chief auditing examiner who was the principal witness against Johnson, was named in two true bills charging assault and battery on J. S. Corbin, about 70, of 377 Chestnut street, and with using obscenities to Corbin in an alleged altercation in the state capitol building October 1. Corbin and Pharr are first cousins, it was said.

He and others were understood to have told the jury that an audit of Johnson's accounts as cashier on January 1 showed a shortage of $1,833. It was understood that this amount represented fishing license fees collected in the field and sent to the wildlife department, which was not banked nor accounted for, it was said.

Corbin told reporters that he went to the capitol to see his cousin in about a land contract and that he got in an altercation. He said Pharr hit him on the arm and cursed him.

Dice Expert Won't Show His Throw

Damon Runyon's famous story about the Broadway tough guy who shot dice in his derby and collected the dough without letting anybody else see in the hat had its counterpart yesterday in Fulton criminal court.

Three boys about 12 years old, Jimmie Wages, Johnnie Kous, and John W. Smith, all of 1408 John S. McClelland street, were in a crap game with J. E. Parker, 46, in a room on North avenue recently. Parker won $5 from each of the boys.

When he shot the dice, he scooped them up so quick, we couldn't see what he had thrown and he would call "seven" or "eleven," the boys told the judge. "But when we were shooting and made a point, he would say he didn't see it and would make us shoot again."

Judge McClelland thought this method of gambling so reprehensible he sentenced Parker to serve six months on public works.

Funds totaling $667,334.80 were deposited with the clerk of United States district court as the first of the money to be used for the land, owned by 326 persons and firms.

Nickel, Synthetic Rubber Are Put on Priority List

Parties Spent $22,716,792 On Campaigns

Study of Program To Restrict Political Funds Urged.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(UP)—The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee today reported expenditures of $22,716,792 by the major political parties in the 1940 campaign, and recommended congressional study of a program for further restrictions on political funds.

Noting that the Hatch act limitation of $3,000,000 on the amount any one committee may spend in any one year had been "ineffective in preventing the expenditure of enormous sums of money," the committee reported that spending by Republican forces totaled $16,622,453; by Democrats, $6,095,387. Contributions to the two organizations, it said, were $18,156,332 and $6,284,462, respectively.

The committee, headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, Iowa, found that the Hatch act limitation had resulted in the mushrooming of "independent" groups supporting both President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie, whose funds supplemented those of state committees and the regular national organizations. Similarly, it said, state committees took a larger part in the national campaign, working closely with the independent groups and the national committees to spread out spending.

It suggested that congress consider the possibility of putting a ceiling on the combined total amount of funds which may be spent by all organizations supporting a given candidate for President.

385 University Students Hold NYA Positions

Variety of Jobs Done in Spare Time From Studies.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, March 7.—From reading to a blind classmate to running highly technical machines, 385 students at the University of Georgia are combining work with getting an education—and liking it.

These 385 students work during their spare time as part of the National Youth Administration; set up by the government, but every cent they receive is hard-earned money.

Six years ago, the New Deal organized the NYA and the university received its first appropriation. Since that time the appropriation has increased until it reached $47,000 for the 1940-41 school year.

Average salary for these part-time workers is $13.59 per month, with students earning less than $10 and the maximum salary set at $20 per month. No matter what the job a professor or official of the university wants done, there is always some NYA student who has had experience along that line who can fill the bill.

NYA students are not confined to more routine activities. One may be operating the university telephone switchboard while another conducts a survey on the parking problem at the university. Still another will be reading newspapers more than 100 years old in research for the alumni office.

The largest concentration of NYA workers is found in the library system, where 80 students obtain part-time employment.

Every school and department in the university employs at least one worker, and some schools as many as 20 students.

First requirement for a student to obtain NYA employment is a good average in his studies. Next, he must show a desire to work—no NYA student who doesn't like his work will last long, for there are too many other students who would like to have his job.

Man, 49, Sees Father First Time

LAVONIA, Ga., March 7.—(P)—L. B. Fagan, 49, recently made a trip to Benton, Arkansas, where he saw his father, William Tatum Fagan, 74, for the first time.

The elder Fagan left Georgia three months before the son was born. A year ago the son learned his father was living in Arkansas. The younger Fagan carried a photograph of his father, taken in Georgia 50 years ago, with him. He said the photograph convinced his father of the son's identity—his father had a copy of the same picture on his mantelpiece.

Urgent Needs Still Go Unmet, Leaders Find

Despite Increase in Contributions, Atlanta Fund Is Not Enough.

While Atlanta's annual community funds have grown, number of contributors increased, collection of pledges improved and administrative costs lowered in recent years, urgent human needs are still going unmet because of inadequate resources, it was reported at the annual meeting of some 200 leaders in private welfare effort Thursday night at Rich's restaurant.

The gathering re-elected the 1940 lineup of officers, headed by G. K. Selden, as chairman, named five new members of the board of trustees and gave five present board members new terms. Twenty-seven citizens made up the central body responsible for the year-round work of determining, budgeting, allocating and raising the money shared by 34 independent agencies serving vital portions of the local welfare field.

New trustees are Henry Heinz, DeSales Harrison, Robert S. Sams, E. A. Thornwell and W. D. Thompson. Mr. Selden, chairman; Mrs. Emmett L. Quinn, Bobby Jones and Harry Sommers, vice chairman, and Julian V. Boehm, treasurer, will again head the volunteer civic organization.

Continuing on the board will be George C. Biggers, Frederick S. Arkwright, Miss Ira Jarrell, Mrs. Green D. Warren, Dr. Herman L. Turner, H. Carl Wolf, Robert Strickland, Richard H. Rich, Ralph McGill, James C. Malone, Herman Heyman, W. C. Harris, Dr. J. Sam Gray, Cherry L. Emerson, LeGare Day, Alvin B. Cates and Mrs. Russell Bellman.

Last fall's city-wide appeal produced $499,556 and was given by $4,115 individual contributors, it was announced by Boyce M. Edens, director-secretary. While this amount topped all previous totals it lacked $73,000 of providing the minimum sum essential for underwriting bare needs of the agencies for another 12 months, according to Chairman Selden.

J. S. Roberts, speaking for the budget committee, outlined the procedure followed by some 650 private citizens experienced in financial aspects of the fund, to determine the amount the public is asked to subscribe annually and who keep a constant check on expenditures.

Richard H. Rich, who succeeds H. Carl Wolf as general chairman of the city-wide appeal, said he is already actively recruiting leadership for the volunteer force of solicitors.

It was reported that 62,110 men, women and children were directly aided last year in varied fields of dependency. Care of children, family rehabilitation, health, youth guidance and other services carried on by the agencies for relieving and preventing evils arising from misfortune and want.

Tallulah Bankhead And Husband Part

WINSTON SALEM, N. C., March 7.—(P)—Tallulah Bankhead, the actress, announced tonight that after "long and conscientious thought" she and her actor husband, John Emery, "have agreed to separate with mutual understanding on both our parts."

The daughter of the late speaker of the house of representatives, William Bankhead, said in a statement: "There is no third party involved on either side. We chose rather to put the blame on that 'old debbil' career which through force of circumstances has separated us for the better part of our marriage."

"This will in no way affect our mutual esteem and great respect for each other. To other further inquiries I will have nothing more to add to this statement."

Georgia To Call 2,000 Monthly Into the Army

Smallest Draft Will Be Followed by Marked Increase.

Fulton and DeKalb draft boards will furnish 84 men, 29 white and 55 Negroes, to be inducted beginning Monday at Fort McPherson and Fort Benning with 328 other Georgians selected in the state's fourth draft call.

The first March quota was the smallest call yet received by local boards, but draft machinery has started that will put approximately 2,000 Georgians a month into the Army until July 15.

Boards were to work this week on filling the fifth quota from headquarters, a call for 800 white men and 450 Negroes to be inducted March 21-31. Men in the fourth call will be inducted March 10-20, the white going to Fort McPherson and the Negroes to Fort Benning.

The new system of sending a group of men every 10 days instead of monthly is expected to start a speedier turnover in many boards where men, drafted and volunteers, have been waiting as high as 90 days after their physical examinations.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(P) A request to congress for authority to keep the National Guard in service for an additional six months or a year appeared in prospect today, after an official acknowledgment that such a step was under consideration.

The War Department said the request might be made, depending on international developments and the state of national defenses, but stressed that no decision had been reached.

President Roosevelt commented that it was all new to him, in response to a press conference question.

General George C. Marshall, War Department chief of staff, has expressed doubts that the armed forces will be strong enough to warrant demobilization of 300,000 or more trained and seasoned guardsmen beginning next summer.

The Spanish press reported that Mme. Lupescu herself engineered the escape, even managing to save the valuable art collection Carol had brought from Rumania.

The pictures were mysteriously shipped to her, they said.

Reports from Lisbon said Carol and Magda had established residence in a modest chalet there and that they had received permission to remain in Portugal for some time.

(Previous reports had said they intended to go to the United States.)

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—Rita Hayworth is never so happy as when posing in new clothes—unless it is when she is buying them. She is currently gotten up in an American-made lace suit decorated with silver fox. The dress is princess-styled, topped by a full-length lace raglan coat, belted in front, and garnished with cuffs and pockets of silver fox. Self fabric buttons decorate the collarless upper part of the coat. Her hat is a puff of silver fox. Gloves, shoes and bag are in black kid.

Miss Hayworth also has a lace sweater dress—blue and white striped cotton lace with alternating horizontal and vertical sections in the skirt. Hip-length sweater blouse. High, round, darted neckline—and at the waist a narrow red suede belt. . . . Her one-piece play suit in cadet blue lace is diamond-shaped in design, with unpressed pleats in front and back, which give the shorts a ruffled hem line. The suit is short-sleeved and collarless, permitting the use of costume jewelry, with a zipper front opening. As a prevention against too much sun, Rita also wears a hip-length lace cape of matching color.

Dorothy Lamour danced with Greg Bautzer at the Victor Hugo in a yellow chiffon frock, embroidered with jade and yellow sequins about the neckline and waistline. The bodice had the midriff veiled at front and at the sides. Dotty clipped a jade green ostrich feather in her hair with a diamond bow-knot, wore jade green crepe pumps, and carried a matching beaded bag.

Economy note. You can brighten your last season's sports or dressy suit with new accessories. Which reminds me of Lana Turner's gloves and Ann Sothorn's bag. The gloves are English suede, with palms in bright green; the backs are red with fuzzy white angora hand-stitching on the fingertips. . . . Ann's bag is in black suede, with a wide sash handle, and bright glints of gold at the bottom of the bag, giving it the effect of a frill.

If you want to know what a real sarong looks like, forget the contraptions worn by Dorothy Lamour and take a look at Brenda Marshall in "Singapore Woman." She is wearing what is called a true sarong dinner gown. (Dorothy Lamour's costume is a "pau" sarong, indigenous to the South Sea islands). Brenda's sarong, originating in the Malay peninsula, is ankle length and draped from the hips. It shows a long skirt made from four highly-colored East Indian scarves, a bare midriff, and a matching brassiere covered by a white cotton bolero buttoned from top to bottom. Miss Marshall has copied the get-up for wear at Palm Springs.

For an afternoon dress in the picture, Brenda wears blonde linen with a large skirt pocket from which falls a gracefully-lobbed single Indian handkerchief. Just below the single button on the bodice is a cut-out small diamond. With the dress Brenda wears a turban of the linen twisted into a big knot from which spaghetti-like fringes droop over her brow.

In her own wardrobe Miss Marshall has a new spring frock in green wool jersey with sleeveless bolero in black. With it she wears a French provincial wide-brimmed hat posed well above her pompadour and in black felt. Her bag is in green jersey, gloves and shoes in black. And, by the way, designer Orry-Kelly says it's definitely "green for glamour" this new season.

Your Speech Helps Your Rise in Life

"I feel LIKE I hadn't been ANY PLACE before," he thinks, impressed by the home he's entering.

Social opportunity knocks at least once for everyone, but little comes of it if you feel inferior, conscious of weak points such as poor speech.

"AS IF I hadn't . . . ANYWHERE"—these are the correct forms that would be used by the smart people you're meeting. Hearing them, talk, you grow more and more ill at ease, make worse and worse errors—saying "THOSE kind" for "THAT kind," "HAVEN'T" only for "HAVE only." No wonder you're labelled as "not belonging."

But English errors are so easily uprooted. And once you've made a habit of the correct forms, you feel so much more confident, assured.

Do you catch yourself saying "HE HAD OUGHT," "SHE DON'T"? Make a note of your errors and you'll soon be saying correctly, "HE OUGHT," "SHE DOESN'T."

Or perhaps an extra word slips in, you say "Where are you going TO?" "I seldom EVER do." To educated ears such faults sound just as badly as more glaring ones. So be sure you say correctly, "Where are you going?" "I seldom do."

A pity to cause raised eyebrows even by a little confusion in the meanings of words. Do you sometimes mistake "ingenious" and "ingenueous," practically twin sisters at first glance? Looking them up, you'll find "ingenious" means clever, but "ingenueous" means frank, candid.

Good speech means so much in a world where you're judged mostly by first impressions! Our 40-page booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, lists errors you're likely to make and the correct forms. Explains right meanings of words often misused. A guide to faultless English!

Woman's Quiz

Q. How can I freshen stale English walnuts?
A. Heat them in a slow oven.

Q. What kind of articles symbolize the 20th wedding anniversary?
A. China.

Q. Should a widow continue to wear her wedding ring on the left hand or change it to the right hand?
A. She wears it on the left hand.

Q. Are raw or cooked eggs easier to digest?
A. Soft or hard cooked eggs are easier to digest than raw eggs.

Q. How can I clean smoke from the mica in the front of a stove?
A. Wipe it with hot vinegar.

Q. Which vitamin is technically known as ascorbic acid?
A. Vitamin C.

Q. How can I stop my child from picking his nose?
A. If crusts are present in the child's nose, oil the inner lining by putting two or three drops of mineral oil up each nostril. This will soften and loosen the crusts which can then be blown out in a handkerchief. The child should be taught to blow his nose in a handkerchief held in front, without pressing on either side.

Q. Please give me a recipe for scones.
A. The ingredients are 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, and 1 cup milk. Make into a soft dough, roll out on a floured board to 3-4 to 1 inch thickness, cut in squares or circles or make into balls and flatten with the hand. Bake in hot oven until light brown, or for about 20 minutes.

Q. Should roasts be seared to hold in the juices?
A. No. Searing actually drives the juices out. To keep all the juice possible, cook your roast in a moderate oven with an even temperature from beginning to end.

Psychology Used in Business Can Be Applied to Marriage

By Caroline Chatfield.

Who is to blame when a middle-aged pair discover they have nothing in common but their children? Maybe neither of them. Maybe each of them. Yet nothing is accomplished by pointing out the guilty party, if we could. Both suffer. Both pay. Both must forgive and forget and make a fresh start if they are to rebuild their shattered relationship. And it can be done.

Any man who has succeeded in business or profession has met and mastered many a problem that seemed to defy solution. Any man who has climbed the ladder of success knows what it means to be patient, persistent, to refuse to admit defeat even though he slips a rung now and then. He has wrestled with his competitors, struggled with employees, figured with the banks, kicked the sheets at night trying to arrive at solutions of troublesome questions and usually has found the answers. Then he has had to take his associates into his confidence, convince them that he's right and get their co-operation in putting over his program.

If he has leaks he cannot stop. If his expenses are mounting faster than the business warrants and he isn't getting proper

Should he do less to save his marriage? The same psychology he employs in his business can be applied to his marriage. The same forthright honesty, tact and diplomacy, the willingness to forego personal advantage here to gain larger advantage there, the same effort to be fair and just, to live and let live are applicable to the job of pulling his marriage out of the red and making it pay.

A woman who has lost her husband's romantic love is usually bitter, sarcastic and vengeful toward him. She will resort to any means to punish him, down to drawing the children in the middle. Her heart and vanity are hurt and "hell hath no fury . . ." So she loses her husband's friendship and she's his fighting enemy. Doesn't a business man know how to deal with the sensitive associate whom he very much needs in his business, who, he knows, depends upon him to an even larger extent?

Try this effective bicycle exercise to keep your spirits up and your figure down. It's briskly stimulating and will streamline the figure.

Muscular Control Builds Up, Smooths Out the Figure

By Ida Jean Kain.

Fashion insists that figures be spare through the middle, and frocks are fitted so smoothly that a bulge over the diaphragm is practically fatal. Not only that, but the tummy must be as flat as a flapjack.

It has come to a point where exercise is the style—and that makes it a necessity, from the feminine viewpoint. You may not need an entire set of calisthenics, but you can't do without a few midriff slimmers.

If you will take just 10 minutes a day for this type of exercise, you can build up the muscular control which will prevent your figure from going every which way through the middle, and acquire a nice, snug feeling through the waist and tummy.

Since you don't want to spend too much time putting your waistline in its place, you must make every move count, so be accurate and thorough.

Let's begin with a three-way stretch that will nip you in almost before you know it:

Lie on the back on the floor with the arms down at sides and legs straight down. Fling the left arm up and back on the floor, and, simultaneously, stretch the left leg across the right and touch toes to the floor beyond. Then return left leg and arm to starting position and perform the same exercise with the right leg and arm. Keep it up, alternating sides, and put rhythm into the movement. Repeat 30 times.

When you have finished, just relax for a minute, then go on to this one:

Roll over, face downward, and lie at full extension, the right arm from the shoulder—keep knee and elbow straight—and roll across the front of the body to the left side. Now, raise the left arm and leg and roll back to the right side. Raising the limbs gives you more momentum—and adds stretch that speeds up results. Keep rolling for 10 counts each side. This exercise is guaranteed to slim and flatten.

Here's a third one for the waistline duff:

Over on the back again, with the arms straight up on the floor

Chinese Hais: Trends were clearly defined. Young silhouettes and favorites, stemmed from Chinese motifs. For the "pure-browed" were variations of the coolie's mushroom crown or sleek turbans with low-flung flowers. The graceful halo of the Oriental bride inspired a group of delicately designed pompadour on "hair fringe" hats, the brims vivid with embroidery. Pagoda shapes and the trim peasant pillow were other sources for adaptation.

Today's Charm Tip

You've heard it said: "She is a perfectly grand person BUT she never stops talking. She wears me down completely." It's the people who stop to listen who have the most friends.

Chilblain Treatment The Same As Frostbite

By Dr. William Brady.

Chilblain, being first degree frostbite, comparable with a first degree burn, which means a burn that only reddens the skin and causes some irritation but does not destroy skin or other tissues and does not raise blisters, calls for the same prevention and treatment as ordinary frostbite or freezing.

A reader reports: "I used to suffer from chilblains and the more I dressed for warmth the more I suffered. So I began wearing less. I found that perforated shoes and light weight overshoes kept my feet just as warm and eliminated most of the sweating. I also tried to keep the overshoes in a cold place so they would not warm my feet too much before I went out. Of course I can't go out in cold weather and just stand around and keep warm in summer footwear but my feet do not get cold when I am walking and I haven't suffered chilblains or frostbite for a number of years." (F. H. F.)

The reader deals sensibly with the important predisposing factor of chilblains, dampness. It makes little difference whether the feet, or rather the foot coverings, are damp or wet from sweating or from exposure to slush or water. Excess of moisture in the coverings of the feet impairs the insulation of the footwear, makes it a heat conductor, and so makes the feet cold.

A great many victims of cold feet, whether they suffer actual chilblain or frostbite or not, make the mistake which F. H. F. corrected; that is, they wear excessive foot covering, just as they wear too much clothing because it is the winter season and they have a childish notion that the warmer you dress the safer and more comfortable you will be. The contrary is true—the less clothing you can get by with at any time and in any circumstance, in physical comfort, the safer and the healthier you will be. I say "physical comfort"—meaning actual bodily well being, not morbid fancy or fear of "taking cold."

Individuals subject to cold feet, and especially those subject to chilblains, should wear loose or loosely knitted wool stockings or at least stockings with such feet; thick cork insoles; loose-fitting shoes with soles broad enough and long enough to permit free movement of the toes. They should avoid tight shoes, tight garters around the leg. Whenever and whenever possible, many times in the day, they should lie on back with legs lifted to vertical and ride an imaginary bicycle a few moments in that position, to help the circulation.

To control excessive sweating of the feet, pour into each shoe, from one to the other, once in two weeks, enough diluted formaldehyde solution to moisten entire insole, and then let the shoes so treated dry out thoroughly for at least 24 hours before you wear them again. For this purpose dilute standard 37 per cent. Liquor Formaldehyde by putting an ounce (two tablespoons) in a half-pint bottle and filling the bottle with water.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. And This One Doesn't Know Where to Find It.

I have tried several food stores and drug stores, but no one seems to have wheat germ. Please tell me where I can get it.

MRS. H. H. A. Answer—Any miller can catch out a few pounds for a customer. Any market or grocery or feed store or seed store or drug store can procure fresh wheat germ in, say, two-pound packages, for customers. It is impossible for me to direct people to individual sources of supply.

Prints That 'Trim' Figure Are Smart

Either short or three-quarter length sleeves are included. Use pretty clips, a necklace or flowers at the simple V-neckline. This unusually flattering style is sure to be the "belle" of your new-season wardrobe—and you'll find it wonderfully easy to make, too!

MY DAY: English Send Many Letters of Gratitude

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—The young people who came here yesterday afternoon from the Lawrenceville, N. J., school were most interested in what they saw. They spent the morning visiting the supreme court, the senate and the house.

One of the boys is going to come down for the summer to work in a New Jersey congressman's office. I suggested mildly that I did not consider Washington a perfect summer resort, but that did not dampen his ardor in the least. I hope he will find much to interest him.

Mr. John Brainerd McHarg, from Rochester, N. Y., showed me some beautiful slides yesterday afternoon. His hobby is taking color photographs and developing uses in the teaching field for these slides on all types of subjects. A few friends came to dinner last night. This morning I was glad to awaken to a beautiful day, for we are off by plane to Miami, Fla., where we are going to spend a very peaceful week, I hope.

I have a letter from an Englishwoman which I am quoting here in part: "As an Englishwoman, may I say how much I appreciate the great kindness and generosity shown by the people of the U. S. A. In our war effort. It is an inspiration to know that we have such friends. . . . We will stand the blood and tears if your great country will share the sweat. My son, who is a 'Worcester' cadet, goes to sea. (He will still be not quite 17.) My husband is an enthusiastic member of the Home Guard. Our two countries seem to be agreed on one great point—that the leader of this world is not named Hitler and that his book is not called 'Mein Kampf.' There is tremendous hope and faith in that for the future."

This is one of the many which have come to me expressing gratitude for the help which American citizens have sent them. I think there has been very generous giving on the part of our people to all the various charities which have undertaken to do a variety of work for the sufferers in Europe.

I wish, however, we could succeed in doing for every group what is now being attempted in the Chinese charities.

There they are co-ordinating and raising their funds jointly. I imagine the central body, representing all the different interests, will decide, as the money comes in, where it should be allocated according to the needs.

This is a plan which I should like to see followed by all other groups, particularly in the case of those doing work for Great Britain. From the point of view of shipping, it is so important that no space should be taken up by anything which is not really needed in Great Britain at the present time.

Superb Films Greet Atlanta Cinema Fans

Psychological Side Gets Airing in Week's Theater Program.

By LEE ROGERS, Motion Picture Editor.

Films of the caliber which give the motion picture industry the right to occasionally speak of "the cinema arts" make a clean sweep of the new offerings along Peachtree's theater row this week.

While it is a pity they all must tend to the dreary side, this is by no means saying they deal with current front page news subjects. They don't. Taken as a unit, they offer varying degrees of psychological study.

Superbly produced is "The Long Voyage Home," at the Rox, directed by the 1940 Academy Award winner, John Ford. It is a truly enthralling sea story, of life aboard the clunky transatlantic steamers which ply the seas of commerce, so well produced you almost breathe the sea air.

This same John Ford, with the aid of the Georgian, Nunnally Johnson, has done a swell job in disfiguring the stage version of "Tobacco Road" for mass movie reception. It's at the Fox, with innuendo for filth and with a happy ending.

"Adam Had Four Sons" pits Ingrid Bergman against Susan Hayward in a love battle of blitz intensity.

La heralded of the new presentations, but near the best with magnificent performances by Robert Montgomery and George Sanders, is the James Hilton psychological study of jealousy, "Rage in Heaven," at Loew's.

TOBACCO ROAD GETS DRY CLEANING

A third version of Erskine Caldwell's provocative "Tobacco Road"—the movie version—is un-reeling currently at the Fox theater, its filth of dialogue given way to innuendo and a form of comedy, its pitiful story of degenerates given a happy ending with Jeeter and Ada finding rent money to hold their claim to Tobacco Road's long since infertile soil.

Nunnally Johnson and John Ford have done a good job in making a film from Caldwell's material which will be acceptable to the mass audience. But they have done the same thing before with "The Grapes of Wrath." In the "Wrath" picture they had no more dirt, but an easier task. The people of "Wrath" still had ambition to better themselves. In "Tobacco Road" they were dealing with a people without the ambition to put themselves free from the grasping tentacles of inertia. Therefore, it will probably not have the sociologically beneficial effect of "Grapes of Wrath."

Grapewin Is Fine.

Charley Grapewin plays a fine Jeeter. He is made up in the appearance of the John Barton who played the role on the stage here—fat and chubby though underfed. It was Grapewin who played Grandpa in "Grapes of Wrath."

He was the only Joad family member who couldn't detach himself from the soil. In that the two roles are similar, Jeeter wants only money to carry him over year after year. Making a crop or losing it means nothing. His character is well exemplified by the loose board on the porch of the cabin which slaps him each time he sits down. "I must fix that tomorrow." Like Scarlett, with Jeeter it's always tomorrow for the unpleasant things.

Aside from some glaring location blunders, the film is produced well. Augusta is depicted as a dirt road, kick town, with mountains in the background. The Georgia peach state auto tag of 1940 is authentic, however. That tag is the only direct tie the film has to Georgia for those who might not know the stage and novel versions.

Supporting Cast. Ward Bond plays a brutal, emotional Lov; Gene Tierney is a dirt-covered Ellie May, without hair-lip but with tantalizing figure protruding from skillfully torn clothing; Elizabeth Patterson is the long-suffering one, Slim Summerville is the neighbor, William Tracy is "Dude" whose lines, surprisingly enough, come through the Johnson scrubbing machine with him still addressing Jeeter as "you ole fool!" Marjorie Rambeau makes a swell Sister Carrie, the best.

Georgians will find no legitimate cause for condemnation or disappointment of the film. You may come away cussing it, and you may think you've wasted your time (which you won't have) but you probably will never forgive yourself if you don't see it. It's that kind of a picture.

"LONG VOYAGE HOME" DUBBED "BEST SEA PICTURE" The Long Voyage Home, the Rox, is one of the best sea pictures ever produced. John Ford directed it from a combination of short plays by Eugene O'Neill.

This film is the story of men who make the commerce of the world. They are the men who run away to sea, the men to whom a tramp steamer is home, and the turbulent sea is their keeper. This film is a life story of these men, told with the aid of one voyage—from a Caribbean island port, to New York where the men were taken aboard for a voyage across a stormy Atlantic, through the war zone and finally home to an English port, but not until some of its crew had died heroes' deaths and might be provided for England's guns. But to them, supplying war guns was just another job; the war was non-existent to these men of the sea who took their pleasures and their hardships as they found them, without women or aboard ship.

The cast includes Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter, John Qualen and John Wayne. There is no romance—except the romance of a thrilling story of the sea. That is sufficient.

BERGMAN, HAYWARD GOOD IN RIALTO FEATURE. "Adam Had Four Sons," in which the master producer of light, racy comedies—Columbia Studios—turns to the dramatic but still racy, is the offering at the Rialto. It has a multi-told plot, a multi-told story, but it is a movie to watch with a vengeful zip.

It is the influence of two women, one sweet and one loose, on the family headed by Warner Baxter. Ingrid Bergman is the former, Susan Hayward the latter. They reveal their utmost in acting ability in an unforgettable manner as they bring out all that is decent in woman and all that is not.

Hayward has the first role in which she can attract a large movie following, but despite her flashing form, I was more impressed with her smooth, dignified performance by Miss Bergman in the less conspicuous role of the housekeeper. She had to be good to keep the entire film from crumbling.

"Adam Had Four Sons" is taken from "Legends and Treasures" life from the viewpoint of recent movies, with a different perspective.

LOEW'S PRESENTS FILM ON JEALOUSY Robert Montgomery has another of his difficult roles, that of an insanely jealous husband whose warped mind devises an ingenious plan for ridding himself of his suspicions, in "Rage in Heaven," a film based on James Hilton's book and which opened yesterday at Loew's.

The film is a psychological study. It is well enacted. It provides great suspense and it almost provides the perfect crime murder, through a plan too simple to occur to the normal mind.

George Sanders has a sympathetic role for a change, that of the husband's friend who is believed to be stealing the friend's wife pretty Ingrid Bergman.

2 Moves Made To Speed City Traffic Flow

Lights Stepped Up, Bus Plan for Grant Park Approved.

Two steps to accelerate the movement of traffic in Atlanta were taken yesterday.

Marvin L. Thomas, traffic engineer, announced that beginning tomorrow morning light control signals at 19 south side intersections will be changed to speed up the flow of vehicles. This will be accomplished by reducing the light cycle.

While Thomas and his aides were working on the light changes, Mayor LeCraw approved council resolutions authorizing the Georgia Power Company to substitute trackless trolley and bus lines for three street car lines in the south side sections. The change will facilitate the movement of vehicles, according to traffic engineers.

Under the new company program, which will become effective in about six months, buses will be substituted for trolleys on three Grant Park lines, trackless trolleys will replace buses on Stewart avenue line, and an express service will be established between downtown Atlanta and Fort McPherson.

Thomas said the traffic control lights will be switched from a 60-second cycle to 40 seconds, but asked motorists to move off rapidly when green lights appear, to get as many machines as possible through. Lights will remain green and red for 18 seconds each, and amber lights for two seconds' duration will sandwich each change.

The intersections affected will be Forsyth, Broad, Whitehall, Pryor and Washington streets and Central avenue where they cross Atlanta, Hunter, Mitchell and Trinity avenue.

TEMPTATION — Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda appear in the amusing "Lady Eve," a slapstick comedy of romance, which gets a preview at 11:30 o'clock tonight at the Fox theater. Yes, the apple has a place in the plot.

from him. He is charged with the murder of Montgomery, and his being, the killing of his child, the tears in his eyes, as he receives the death penalty for the crime he didn't commit, is one of the high points in Sanders' distinguished career as a supporting actor. "Rage in Heaven" offers good drama for an adult mind.

Plane Mechanics Will Train Here A ground school for airplane mechanics who will be trained for private industry has been set up and will begin operations Monday at Candler airport, it was disclosed yesterday.

The school is under sponsorship of the Georgia state advisory committee of the National Defense Commission and is the first step in this section in a national program to train men for work in the vitally-important airplane industry.

Working co-operatively on the school are the Georgia WPA, Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Atlanta airport.

A preliminary allotment of $3,000 has been appropriated for the school. Ten men will begin taking the course Monday, these men being specially selected from WPA rolls.

Rhythm on the Nest.

Mrs. M. Stanier, of Hornodon on the Hill, England, thinks she has discovered how to make hens lay more eggs. Sheep's paunches made into a kind of mince meat help a lot, but that is not the real secret, she says. "Hens appreciate kindness and have to be kept lively," she explains. "I talk to them several times a day. If they seem quiet, I sing to them to wake them up. They lay well for me because they know I like them."

Mexico Rushes Dam.

Mexico is making strenuous efforts to complete the great dam at Guadalupe, D. F., by the end of next summer. It is stated that the ministry of communications in Mexico City. Its object is to relieve the danger of flood for a wide section of the Valle of Mexico. Ultimately the cost of the project will exceed $650,000. The dam will drain off surplus waters of the Mexico, Piedrad and Conculaco rivers, whose overflow sometimes caused widespread devastation.

The Purpose and Work of the Field Artillery

By Capt. Gene Morgan.

"In previous installments you have briefly described the work of the infantry in modern warfare. Will you tell me something about the Field Artillery?"

The purpose of field artillery is to assist the other arms, especially the infantry and cavalry, by fire power in battle. The most important tactical characteristic of field artillery is the dependability of its fire under all conditions, and its ability to deliver a great volume of fire with powerful and violent surprise effect. Also its power to concentrate its fire on a designated place at the appointed time. There are limitations to its fighting effectiveness, however. Among these are its inability to act otherwise than by fire, its dependence on other arms for protection and its vulnerability when in movement. Light artillery nowadays is mostly truck drawn, although horse-drawn light artillery is employed in cavalry divisions. Types of field artillery are divided into light, medium and heavy.

Light types are the 75-millimeter gun, with a maximum effective range of 13,600 yards; the 105-mm. howitzer (high trajectory),

9,400 yards, and the 105-mm. howitzer, 12,140 yards. (It will be remembered that one mile equals 1,760 yards.)

The medium type is the 155-mm. gun, howitzer, with a range of 12,140 yards.

Heavy types are the 155-mm. gun, ranging effectively at 17,400 yards; the 155-mm. gun, 24,000 yards, and the 240-mm. howitzer, (tractor drawn) 16,400 yards.

The firing rate is estimated at 560 rounds of ammunition per battery (four guns) per hour for light artillery, and 180 rounds per battery per hour for heavy artillery. (This subject will be resumed here at a later date.)

Cow Decides Case.
In a dispute in Cornwall, England, over the ownership of Jenny, a heifer, C. H. Stolman, one of the claimants, called Jenny a witness. When it saw its old cowman, Fred Jewell, after six weeks it at once demonstrated its affection by putting its forelegs over his shoulders. The judge said the cow had decided the case. He had never seen a cow do a trick like that before.

Capital Sought.
To give Mexico two important new industries, the country will need American machinery and capital, according to the minister of national economy in Mexico City. Plans have been approved by President Avila Camacho.

One of the industries would exploit natural gas resources. Mexico is losing $30,000,000 a year in escaping gas. The other project is a great thermo-electrical plant near San Juan del Rio, state of Queretaro, to produce power for an industrial and farm region and to irrigate 40,000 acres. The government promises special facilities for American investment and will back installation of power plants in various parts of the country.

Famed Female Impersonator Eltinge Dies

Reputed To Have Made $3,000,000 on Stage and in Realty.

NEW YORK, March 7.—(UP)—Julian Eltinge, greatest of female impersonators, a career he detested for its implications and endured for the wealth it brought him, died today at 57.

He was stricken 10 days ago with recurrence of a kidney ailment and forced to abandon his engagement at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, where he had been appearing for 10 months with such stars of another era as Gilda Gray, Eddie Leonard and Pat Rooney.

Fifteen years ago physicians warned him that the tight corsets he wore in his act endangered his health.

It was said that he made $3,000,000 in the theater and on real estate. With Al H. Woods and Sol Bloom he built a theater on 42d street in 1910. It was named after him but he never played in it. The theater is a ruin now, and a few weeks ago, feeling nostalgic, Eltinge decided to visit it. He had only a $20 bill, which the suspicious cashier refused to change.

"I am Julian Eltinge," he said. "The theater was named after me. Would you trust me for the 35 cents admission?"

The cashier said she had never heard of him. He didn't get in.

Penny Causes Slaying and Imprisonment

Lightning Shot Dice Game Kibitzer After Argument.

A fight which started over a penny and ended in a killing brought a prison sentence of from five to 10 years yesterday for Jim Lightning—crap shooter par excellence.

Jim entered a plea of guilty before Judge Walter C. Hendrix to shooting Frank Lewis January 8, with a shotgun, in the yard of Lewis' home off McDaniel street. Lewis had tried to cut him with a knife, Jim said.

"Dirty" Was Kibitzer.

Lightning and Willie Adams were squatting in the yard rolling the bones and Frank Lewis, alias "Dirty," was standing alongside watching the galloping dominoes gallop. Willie had the dice and he threw out a nickel on the ground and called for a fade. Lightning flipped four pennies out and says, "You're faded." Willie drew back and tossed up a seven before he noticed there weren't but four pennies there.

"When I see them four pennies I say I don't play for money like that and I pick up my nickel and walk off," Willie Adams stated. But Kibitzer Lewis wasn't so easily satisfied.

Not His Business.

"If that was me and you put down yo' money like that, I pick up yo' money," he asserted to Lightning. Jim told him it wasn't none of his business and one word led to another. Willie Adams didn't know all that happened and other witnesses couldn't recall much else but suddenly Lewis had a knife out and Jim had a slashed hand.

Lightning went to his house near by and returned with a shotgun.

"You don't believe I'll shoot you," he said, according to Willie Adams. "Dirty" Lewis didn't express much opinion either way but all of a sudden he was shot and Lightning was standing there with a smoking gun. "Dirty" Lewis died nine days later at a hospital. And all because of a penny.

W. H. Tanner, Hapeville Justice of Peace, and E. A. Sexton, Justice of Peace at Stone Mountain, were recommended to succeed themselves.
